Gingrich: Obama "Is A One-Sided Apologist For Islamic Extremists While He Is Attacking Christianity"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From a September 25, 2012, appearance by Newt Gingrich on Fox News' On the Record with Greta Van Susteren:

GINGRICH: For 10 days after the Benghazi attack, the Obama administration denied it was a terrorist attack.

GRETA VAN SUSTEREN (HOST): That's a different issue.

GINGRICH: No.

VAN SUSTEREN: That is a profoundly different issue.

GINGRICH: But after Carney that morning said, 'Okay everybody now concedes it's a terrorist act,' the same afternoon, Obama went back to the, 'Oh, it's really caused by the film.' I think it's because he wasn't coordinating.

VAN SUSTEREN: Well, he was talking about the film today, which was sort of interesting. He's talking about the video before the U.N. in his speech and talking about how, you know, we don't insult the—we should not tolerate insulting religions, yet there was no mention of the fact that Ahmadinejad is going to be speaking tomorrow on the holiest day of the Jewish faith, Yom Kippur, so that he spoke about the insult to the Muslim world with this video, but he neglected to talk about the insult to Jews, while he's dissing the prime minister of Israel.

GINGRICH: Well, it's worse—From an American perspective, it's worse than that. Obama spent I think three paragraphs on a nutcake film that nobody had seen. Meanwhile, in the same city as Cardinal Dolan, who has openly said the Obama administration's waging war on the Catholic church. Now why is Obama fixated on appeasing Muslims while attacking Catholics? And why is that not a topic that ought to be on every network talk show? I mean here's a president who is a one-sided apologist for Islamic extremists while he is attacking Christianity in his own country. It's pretty bizarre.

Independence Virginia PAC: "A Kick In The Teeth"

Independence Virginia PAC hits former Virginia Gov. Tim Kaine (D) over a set of cuts to public education he proposed during his tenure, paraphrasing a local supervisor to call the cuts "a kick in the teeth." But the ad glosses over the devastating recession that cut short state revenues, forcing Kaine to propose tough cuts in virtually every sector, and the fact that Kaine's successor approved a budget with even larger education cuts in order to avoid tax increases.

"Kick In The Teeth" Was Local Supervisor's Reaction To Kaine's Effort To Save Money And Protect Vulnerable School Districts

Virginia Uses A Complicated Formula To Determine How Much State Money Various School Districts Get For Education. From the Washington Post: "Virginia's funding formula is meant to distribute money equitably, so poor districts get more school funding from Richmond and wealthy districts get less. The result is that the state currently pays for less than 25 percent of Fairfax school's budget and closer to 80 percent for some other districts. Many in Northern Virginia have long found it unfair to shoulder such a large share of education costs locally and statewide. Every two years, the formula is recalculated, using updated data on enrollment, income, retail sales and real estate values." [Washington Post, 1/11/10]

In 2010, Kaine Proposed Delaying Recalculation Of Formula To Save Money And Protect Vulnerable Virginia School Districts. From the Washington Post: "Gov. Timothy M. Kaine proposed a one-year delay in the regularly scheduled readjustment of the formula, a move that would prevent the influx of more than $120 million in additional state funds over the next year to cash-strapped schools in Fairfax, Prince William and Loudoun counties. This fiscal year, Richmond is sending nearly $1 billion to those counties to fund operating costs in public schools. The fate of the so-called composite index is tied to the state budget process, which will be negotiated in the coming legislative session. Kaine proposed the one-year delay in part because it would save $30 million statewide. [...] This year, for once, several Northern Virginia districts stood to gain significantly more in state funding, largely because of dramatic declines in the housing market. The news was welcomed by local school officials. But for more than 90 of the state's 136 school districts, the readjustment meant a greater local burden, and Kaine's proposal aimed to protect these vulnerable districts." [Washington Post, 1/11/10]

"Kick In The Teeth" Was One Local Supervisor's Reaction To Denying Money To Fairfax County. From the Washington Post: "Northern Virginia officials, facing unprecedented cuts in their prized school systems, are crying foul. Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova (D) called Kaine's proposal a 'kick in the teeth.' 'We have played by the rules,' she said. 'And it's not fair to change the rules the very year that Fairfax would get some benefit from them.'" [Washington Post, 1/11/10]

Incoming GOP Gov. McDonnell's Education Cuts Were Even Larger Than Cuts Kaine Proposed

Virginia's Constitution Requires The Budget To Be Balanced Every Two Years, So Kaine Was Forced To Propose Cuts To Close Recession-Fueled Shortfalls. From FactCheck.org: "Virginia adopts a new budget every two years, and amendments are added to it in the odd year to square the numbers. There's no question that Virginia experienced serious budget shortfalls during the recession due to much lower-than-anticipated revenues. But the shortfall was closed by the end of the biennium. The same Virginian-Pilot story in which Kaine talks about a $3.7 billion shortfall, notes that the stimulus provided $1 billion in budget relief, and that lawmakers were forced to cut $2.7 billion to balance the budget, as required by the state constitution. Responding to the ad on Nov. 10, Kaine told WVEC ABC 13: 'I left office with two balanced budgets that I submitted because you have to, by law, submit balanced budgets.'" [FactCheck.org, 11/15/11]

$357 Million In K-12 Education Cuts Were Just A Proposal That GOP Gov. McDonnell And GOP House Would Have Had To Approve. From the Associated Press: "Gov. Tim Kaine proposes decreasing state support for public schools by $357 million by 2012. [...] The proposals are in a two-year state budget Kaine presented Friday. The plan struggles to reconcile a revenue shortfall of $3.6 billion from 2010 through 2012. [...] The exiting Democrat's proposal must win approval by an anti-tax Republican House and a Republican governor who succeeds him next month." [Associated Press via WHSV.com, 12/18/09]

- Proposal's Overall Education Cuts Were $400 Million. From the Washington Post article cited in the ad: "Gov. Timothy M. Kaine launched a budget-balancing proposal Wednesday that would transform the commonwealth's old-guard fiscal policies into ones that reflect the political conversion from red state to blue. [...] In offering his budget amendments to the House and Senate money committees Wednesday, Kaine set about guiding the state through an economic crisis that is likely to define his four-year term as governor. [...] Some of Kaine's proposals were painful but expected. State agencies, including colleges, would face 15 percent cuts. He proposed a $400 million cut to education funding and a $400 million cut to Medicaid, which helps cover medical needs for the indigent, elderly, blind and disabled." [Washington Post, 12/18/08]

Final Budget Signed By Incoming Gov. McDonnell Cut Even More From School Funding In Order To Avoid Raising Taxes. From the Washington Post: "The Virginia General Assembly adjourned its annual legislative session Sunday evening after adopting a two-year, $82 billion budget that cuts millions from education, health care and public safety -- curtailing state spending more aggressively than any in generations while fulfilling the new Republican governor's promise not to raise taxes. [...] Funding for schools will drop $646 million over the next two years; the state will also cut more than $1 billion from health programs. Class sizes will rise. [Washington Post, 3/15/10]

GOP House Also Approved Community College Cuts Necessitated By Recession

College Spending Cuts Were Approved By Virginia's GOP-Controlled House. From PolitiFact.com: "[GOP Virginia Del. Scott] Lingamfelter cited data from a 2010 report by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia. It shows the amount of general funds spent for each in-state, full-time student at a four-year college fell from $8,709 in budget years 2006 and 2007 to $6,500 in 2010 and 2011. That's a 25.4 percent drop. At community colleges, average state funding per student fell from $4,602 in fiscal 2006 and 2007 to $2,946 in 2010 and 2011, a 36 percent decrease. [...] Is it fair to blame Kaine for the cuts to the colleges? All of the spending levels Kaine recommended for colleges and universities -- within a few dollars -- were in state budgets that were approved with overwhelming bipartisan support in the Republican-controlled House of Delegates. [...] Brandi Hoffine, a spokeswoman for the Kaine, said the former governor had to cut nearly every part of the state budget to cope with the deep recession." [PolitiFact.com, 4/4/12]

Ending Spending: "Spending Our Future Away'

Ending Spending claims that Rep. Joe Donnelly (D-IN) is "spending our future away," connecting his support for the health care law and the Recovery Act to the rising debt. However, the Affordable Care Act actually reduces the deficit, while the stimulus bill created jobs and helped rescue the economy from a deeper recession. In reality, Bush administration policies and the recession itself caused deficits to explode in recent years.

Affordable Care Act Reduces The Deficit

CBO: The Affordable Care Act Will Reduce Deficits By Over $200 Billion From 2012-2021. According to Congressional Budget Office Director Douglas Elmendorf's testimony before the House on March 30, 2011: "CBO and JCT's most recent comprehensive estimate of the budgetary impact of PPACA and the Reconciliation Act was in relation to an estimate prepared for H.R. 2, the Repealing the Job-Killing Health Care Law Act, as passed by the House of Representatives on January 19, 2011. H.R. 2 would repeal the health care provisions of those laws. CBO and JCT estimated that repealing PPACA and the health-related provisions of the Reconciliation Act would produce a net increase in federal deficits of $210 billion over the 2012–2021 period as a result of changes in direct spending and revenues. Reversing the sign of the estimate released in February provides an approximate estimate of the impact over that period of enacting those provisions. Therefore, CBO and JCT effectively estimated in February that PPACA and the health-related provisions of the Reconciliation Act will produce a net decrease in federal deficits of $210 billion over the 2012–2021 period as a result of changes in direct spending and revenues." ["CBO's Analysis of the Major Health Care Legislation Enacted in March 2010," CBO.gov, 3/30/11]

"2 Trillion" Refers To Gross Cost Of Insurance Provisions – Not ACA's Impact On The Deficit

July 2012: CBO's Updated Estimate For Gross Cost Of ACA Insurance Coverage Provisions Is $1.683 Trillion. According to a Congressional Budget Office Report titled "Estimates for the Insurance Coverage Provisions of the Affordable Care Act Updated for the Recent Supreme Court Decision": "CBO and JCT now estimate that the insurance coverage provisions of the ACA will have a net cost of $1,168 billion over the 2012–2022 period—compared with $1,252 billion projected in March 2012 for that 11-year period. That net cost reflects the following: Gross costs of $1,683 billion for Medicaid, CHIP, tax credits, and other subsidies for the purchase of health insurance through the newly established exchanges (and related costs), and tax credits for small employers. [...] Those gross costs are offset in part by $515 billion in receipts from penalty payments, the new excise tax on high-premium insurance plans, and other budgetary effects (mostly increases in tax revenues stemming from changes in employer-provided insurance coverage)." [CBO.gov, July 2012, internal citations removed]

• July 2012 Report Affirmed Projection That ACA Will Reduce Deficits. According to a Congressional Budget Office Report titled "Estimates for the Insurance Coverage Provisions of the Affordable Care Act Updated for the Recent Supreme Court Decision": "CBO and JCT have not updated their estimate of the overall budgetary impact of the ACA; previously, they estimated that the law would, on net, reduce budget deficits." [CBO.gov, July 2012]

"Wasteful" Recovery Act Created Millions Of Jobs, Boosted GDP, And Cut Taxes

Recovery Act "Succeeded In...Protecting The Economy During The Worst Of The Recession." From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "A new Congressional Budget Office (CBO) report estimates that the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) increased the number of people employed by between 200,000 and 1.5 million jobs in March. In other words, between 200,000 and 1.5 million people employed in March owed their jobs to the Recovery Act. [...] ARRA succeeded in its primary goal of protecting the economy during the worst of the recession. The CBO report finds that ARRA's impact on jobs peaked in the third quarter of 2010, when up to 3.6 million people owed their jobs to the Recovery Act. Since then, the Act's job impact has gradually declined as the economy recovers and certain provisions expire." [CBPP.org, 5/29/12]

At Its Peak, Recovery Act Was Responsible For Up To 3.6 Million Jobs. According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office:

> CBO estimates that ARRAs [sic] policies had the following effects in the third quarter of calendar year 2010:
> • They raised real (inflation-adjusted) gross domestic product by between 1.4 percent and 4.1 percent,
> • Lowered the unemployment rate by between 0.8 percentage points and 2.0 percentage points,
> • Increased the number of people employed by between 1.4 million and 3.6 million, and
> • Increased the number of full-time-equivalent (FTE) jobs by 2.0 million to 5.2 million compared with what would have occurred otherwise. (Increases in FTE jobs include shifts from part-time to full-time work or overtime and are thus generally larger than increases in the number of employed workers). [CBO.gov, 11/24/10]

Recovery Act Included $288 Billion In Tax Cuts. From PolitiFact: "Nearly a third of the cost of the stimulus, $288 billion, comes via tax breaks to individuals and businesses. The tax cuts include a refundable credit of up to $400 per individual and $800 for married couples; a temporary increase of the earned income tax credit for disadvantaged families; and an extension of a program that allows businesses to recover the costs of capital expenditures faster than usual. The tax cuts aren't so much spending as money the government won't get -- so it can stay in the economy." [PolitiFact.com, 2/17/10]

Bush Policies And Recession Caused Debt To Skyrocket

Prior To President Obama's Inauguration, President Bush Had Already Created A Projected $1.2 Trillion Deficit For Fiscal Year 2009. From the Washington Times: "The Congressional Budget Office announced a projected fiscal 2009 deficit of $1.2 trillion even if Congress doesn't enact any new programs. [...] About the only person who was silent on the deficit projection was Mr. Bush, who took office facing a surplus but who saw spending balloon and the country notch the highest deficits on record." [Washington Times, 1/8/09]

NYT*: President Bush's Policy Changes Created Much More Debt Than President Obama's. The New York Times published the following chart comparing the fiscal impact of policies enacted under the Bush and Obama administrations:

[New York Times, 7/24/11]

Recession Added Hundreds Of Billions In Deficits By Increasing Spending On Safety Net While Shrinking Tax Revenue. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP) explains: "When unemployment rises and incomes stagnate in a recession, the federal budget responds automatically: tax collections shrink, and spending goes up for programs like unemployment insurance, Social Security, and Food Stamps." According to CBPP: "The recession battered the budget, driving down tax revenues and swelling outlays for unemployment insurance, food stamps, and other safety-net programs. Using CBO's August 2008 projections as a benchmark, we calculate that the changed economic outlook alone accounts for over $400 billion of the deficit each year in 2009 through 2011 and slightly smaller amounts in subsequent years. Those effects persist; even in 2018, the deterioration in the economy since the summer of 2008 will account for over $300 billion in added deficits, much of it in the form of additional debt-service costs." [CBPP.org, 11/18/10; CBPP.org, 5/10/11, citations removed]

Over The Coming Decade, The Bush Tax Cuts Are The Primary Cause Of Federal Budget Deficits. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities prepared a chart showing the deficit impact of the Bush tax cuts (orange), the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, the recession itself, and spending to rescue the economy:

[CBPP.org, 5/10/11]

CBPP: Bush Tax Cuts And Wars Are Driving The Debt. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> The complementary chart, below, shows that the Bush-era tax cuts and the Iraq and Afghanistan wars — including their associated interest costs — account for almost half of the projected public debt in 2019 (measured as a share of the economy) if we continue current policies.

60 Plus Association: "Clear"

The 60 Plus criticizes Rep. Ron Barber (D-AZ) for supporting President Obama, blaming the president's policies for the number of Americans who are still looking for work or receiving food stamps. The truth is that Obama inherited an economy that was losing hundreds of thousands of jobs per month and forcing millions of Americans to rely on government assistance, as Americans suffered through the worst downturn since the Great Depression. Today the economy is growing, the private sector has added almost 5 million new jobs in the last 32 straight months, and consumer confidence has climbed to its highest level since February 2008. The ad also blames the Obama for the rising debt, but the real culprits are Bush-era policies and the recession itself, and Republicans have repeatedly blocked Obama's deficit-reduction proposals.

The Economy Is On The Upswing

The Private Sector Has Added 4.97 Million Jobs Over 32 Consecutive Months Of Private-Sector Growth. The following chart shows the monthly change in private-sector jobs dating back to January 2008.

[BLS.gov, accessed 11/2/12; MSNBC.com, 11/2/12]

Latest BLS Benchmark Shows "Net Job Growth...During Obama's First Term." According to the Huffington Post: "The Labor Department on Thursday morning quietly released a new benchmark for payroll employment in the U.S. It turns out that with the revision, there has been net job growth -- not much, but more than nothing -- during Obama's first term. According to the revision, total non-farm payrolls stood at 133.686 million jobs in August, up from 133.561 million in January 2009, when Obama's first term began. Before the revision, payrolls were at 133.300 million in August. In other words, 125,000 jobs have been created, in total, during Obama's first term, compared with a prior estimate of a loss of 261,000." [Huffington Post, 9/27/12]

Consumer Confidence Is Higher Than It Has Been Since February 2008. According to Bloomberg News: "Confidence among American consumers climbed in October to a more than four-year high, which may help drive bigger gains in the largest part of the economy. The Conference Board's sentiment index increased to 72.2, the highest since February 2008, from a revised 68.4 in September, figures from the New York-based private research group showed today. [...] The percent of respondents who say jobs are currently plentiful rose to the highest level since September 2008, indicating that a decline in joblessness is brightening Americans' moods. Lower gasoline prices and a budding housing recovery are also contributing to the improvement in confidence." [Bloomberg News, 11/1/12]

Massive Monthly Job Losses Obama Inherited Have Turned To Steady Private-Sector Growth

Recession Officially Ran From December 2007 To June 2009, Making It The Longest Since World War II. From the National Bureau of Economic Research: "The Business Cycle Dating Committee of the National Bureau of Economic Research met yesterday by conference call. At its meeting, the committee determined that a trough in business activity occurred in the U.S. economy in June 2009. The trough marks the end of the recession that began in December 2007 and the beginning of an expansion. The recession lasted 18 months, which makes it the longest of any recession since World War II. Previously the longest postwar recessions were those of 1973-75 and 1981-82, both of which lasted 16 months. In determining that a trough occurred in June 2009, the committee did not conclude that economic conditions since that month have been favorable or that the economy has returned to operating at normal capacity. Rather, the committee determined only that the recession ended and a recovery began in that month." [NBER.org, 9/20/10]

- Recession Resulted In 8.3 Million Job Losses. According to the Associated Press, "the Great Recession killed 8.3 million jobs, compared with 1.6 million lost in the 2001 recession." [Associated Press via Yahoo! News, 5/4/12]

- Rise In Food Aid Recipients Is Result Of Recession. From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "A primary driver of the recent rapid caseload growth is the increase in the number of eligible households because of the recession. Poverty has increased substantially, from 12.5 percent in 2007 to 15.1 percent in 2010, resulting in more households qualifying for the program. And, the deep and prolonged nature of the recession has led to record levels of long-term unemployment, extending the length of time that unemployed individuals have needed SNAP. Between 2007 and 2010, as the unemployment rate more than doubled (from 4.6 percent to 9.6 percent), SNAP participation grew 56 percent." [CBPP.org, 4/18/12, emphasis original]

Bush Recession Was So Severe That Economy Was Still Shedding Over Three-Quarters Of A Million Jobs Per Month Through First Few Months Of President Obama's Term. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the economy shed 839,000 jobs in January 2009, 725,000 in February 2009, 787,000 in March 2009, and 802,000 in April 2009, for a four-month average of 788,250 lost jobs per month. [BLS.gov, accessed 5/3/12]

Since The Recession Ended In June 2009, The Private Sector Has Added 3.8 Million Jobs While Public-Sector Employment Has Fallen By 569,000. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were 107,933,000 private-sector jobs in June 2009, and 111,744,000 private-sector jobs in October 2012, an increase of 3,811,000 jobs. The BLS also reports that there were 22,570,000 Americans working in the public sector in June 2009, and 22,011,000 working in the public sector in October 2012, a decrease of 559,000 jobs. The private-sector gains and public-sector losses add up to a total increase of 3,252,000 jobs. The following chart shows the cumulative private-sector job gains and public-sector job losses since the recession officially ended in June 2009:

• Conservative AEI: The Public Sector Has Shrunk, But Private-Sector Growth Is Above Average. From American Enterprise Institute scholar Mark J. Perry: "In the second quarter of 2012, 'public sector GDP' decreased -1.44%, and that was the eighth straight quarter of negative growth for total government spending, averaging -2.88% per quarter over the last two years. In contrast, there have been 12 consecutive quarters of positive growth for private sector GDP averaging 3.07% per quarter in the three years since the recession ended, which is slightly higher than the 2.8% average growth rate in private real GDP over the last 25 years." Bush Policies And Recession Caused Debt To Skyrocket

Prior To President Obama's Inauguration, President Bush Had Already Created A Projected $1.2 Trillion Deficit For Fiscal Year 2009. From the Washington Times: "The Congressional Budget Office announced a projected fiscal 2009 deficit of $1.2 trillion even if Congress doesn't enact any new programs. [...] About the only person who was silent on the deficit projection was Mr. Bush, who took office facing a surplus but who saw spending balloon and the country notch the highest deficits on record." [Washington Times, 1/8/09]

NYT*: President Bush's Policy Changes Created Much More Debt Than President Obama's. The New York Times published the following chart comparing the fiscal impact of policies enacted under the Bush and Obama administrations:

[New York Times, 7/24/11]

Recession Added Hundreds Of Billions In Deficits By Increasing Spending On Safety Net While Shrinking Tax Revenue. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP) explains: "When unemployment rises and incomes stagnate in a recession, the federal budget responds automatically: tax collections shrink, and spending goes up for programs like unemployment insurance, Social Security, and Food Stamps." According to CBPP: "The recession battered the budget, driving down tax revenues and swelling outlays for unemployment insurance, food stamps, and other safety-net programs. Using CBO's August 2008 projections as a benchmark, we calculate that the changed economic outlook alone accounts for over $400 billion of the deficit each year in 2009 through 2011 and slightly smaller amounts in subsequent years. Those effects persist; even in 2018, the deterioration in the economy since the summer of 2008 will account for over $300 billion in added deficits, much of it in the form of additional debt-service costs." [CBPP.org, 11/18/10; CBPP.org, 5/10/11, citations removed]

Over The Coming Decade, The Bush Tax Cuts Are The Primary Cause Of Federal Budget Deficits. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities prepared a chart showing the deficit impact of the Bush tax cuts (orange), the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, the recession itself, and spending to rescue the economy:

[CBPP.org, 5/10/11]

CBPP: Bush Tax Cuts And Wars Are Driving The Debt. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> The complementary chart, below, shows that the Bush-era tax cuts and the Iraq and Afghanistan wars — including their associated interest costs — account for almost half of the projected public debt in 2019 (measured as a share of the economy) if we continue current policies.

Republicans Have Opposed President Obama's Deficit-Reduction Efforts

September 2011: Obama Proposed $3 Trillion In Deficit Reduction, "Republicans Swiftly

Responded ... With Opposition." According to the Los Angeles Times: "President Obama on Monday made an aggressive pitch for his $3-trillion deficit-reduction strategy, promising to veto any proposal that fails to raise revenues by asking wealthy Americans to 'pay their fair share.' [...] His plan for lopping $3 trillion from the deficit is on top of the approximately $1 trillion in spending cuts that he signed into law in August, after reaching a deal with Republican congressional leaders to lift the nation's debt ceiling. On Monday, Republicans swiftly responded to the president's proposal with opposition. [Los Angeles Times,9/19/11]

April 2011: GOP Rejected Obama Proposal To Reduce Deficits By $4 Trillion. According to the Boston Globe: "President Obama pledged yesterday to pare the projected deficit by $4 trillion in the next 12 years, vowing to protect the nation's most vulnerable while pushing again for higher taxes for its richest citizens. [...] His call for the end of the Bush tax cuts for incomes above $250,000 for couples reignites a ferocious debate from the fall midterm elections. That element of the speech triggered the most vociferous and immediate opposition from Republicans." [Boston Globe, 4/14/11]

Super PAC For America: "Obamacare Hurts Seniors: Here's How!"

Dick Morris' literally named "Super PAC for America" a flagrantly dishonest ad against President Obama's health care law, forgoing all the nuance and subtlety usually used by other conservative groups to skirt the truth in favor of blunt falsehoods. Far from weakening Medicare, the law extents the program's solvency by eight years, and rather than ending Medicare Advantage, the Affordable Care Act shores up traditional Medicare by decreasing overpayments to the private alternative that end up driving up the traditional program's premiums. Virtually every word of the ad's claims about the Independent Payment Advisory Board is also false: the "unaccountable" board is actually Senate-confirmed, the board is specifically prohibited from cutting Medicare benefits, and Congress can override the board's recommendations by finding alternate savings or rejecting them with a supermajority.

Affordable Care Act Savings Do Not 'Cut' Medicare Benefits

PolitiFact: Affordable Care Act Does Not Cut Medicare's Budget, It Attempts To Reduce Future Costs. According to PolitiFact, "Neither Obama nor his health care law literally cut a dollar amount from the Medicare program's budget. Rather, the health care law instituted a number of changes to try to bring down future health care costs in the program." [PolitiFact, 8/15/12]

Medicare Spending Reductions "Aimed At Insurance Companies And Hospitals, Not Beneficiaries." According to PolitiFact: "What kind of spending reductions are we talking about? They were mainly aimed at insurance companies and hospitals, not beneficiaries. The law makes significant reductions to Medicare Advantage, a subset of Medicare plans run by private insurers. Medicare Advantage was started under President George W. Bush, and the idea was that competition among the private insurers would reduce costs. But in recent years the plans have actually cost more than traditional Medicare. So the health care law scales back the payments to private insurers. Hospitals, too, will be paid less if they have too many re-admissions, or if they fail to meet other new benchmarks for patient care. Obama and fellow Democrats say the intention is to protect beneficiaries' coverage while forcing health care providers to become more efficient." [PolitiFact, 8/15/12]

• CBO's July Estimate Updates Medicare Cost Savings To $716 Billion. According to the Congressional Budget Office's analysis of a bill to repeal the Affordable Care Act, repeal would have the following effects on Medicare spending: "Spending for Medicare would increase by an estimated $716 billion over that 2013–2022 period. Federal spending for Medicaid and CHIP would increase by about $25 billion from repealing the noncoverage provisions of the ACA, and direct spending for other programs would decrease by about $30 billion, CBO estimates. Within Medicare, net increases in spending for the services covered by Part A (Hospital Insurance) and Part B (Medical Insurance) would total $517 billion and $247 billion, respectively. Those increases would be partially offset by a $48 billion reduction in net spending for Part D." [CBO.gov, 8/13/12]

GOP Plan Kept Most Of The Savings In The Affordable Care Act. According to the Washington Post's Glenn Kessler: "First of all, under the health care bill, Medicare spending continues to go up year after year. The health care bill tries to identify ways to save money, and so the $500 billion figure comes from the difference over 10 years between anticipated Medicare spending (what is known as 'the baseline') and the changes the law makes to reduce spending. [...] The savings actually are wrung from health-care providers, not Medicare beneficiaries. These spending reductions presumably would be a good thing, since virtually everyone agrees that Medicare spending is out of control. In the House Republican budget, lawmakers repealed the Obama health care law but retained all but $10 billion of the nearly $500 billion in Medicare savings, suggesting the actual policies enacted to achieve these spending reductions were not that objectionable to GOP lawmakers." [WashingtonPost.com, 6/15/11, emphasis added]

Affordable Care Act Strengthens, Not Weakens, Medicare's Finances

"The Medicare Trust Fund Will Last Eight Years Longer" Thanks To Health Care Law. The Huffington Post reported: "The Medicare trust fund will last eight years longer than it would have without the passage of last year's health care law, the program's trustees announced Friday in a report. The nonpartisan lead actuary for Medicare, Rick Foster, estimated that without the health care overhaul, the program's trust fund would have run dry by 2016. With the law in effect, Foster projected, the trust fund will last through 2024." [Huffington Post, 5/13/11]

Repealing ACA's Medicare Savings "Would Hasten The Insolvency Of Medicare By Eight Years." According to the New York Times: "Mitt Romney's promise to restore $716 billion that he says President Obama 'robbed' from Medicare has some health care experts puzzled, and not just because his running mate, Representative Paul D. Ryan, included the same savings in his House budgets. The 2010 health care law cut Medicare reimbursements to hospitals and insurers, not benefits for older Americans, by that amount over the coming decade. But repealing the savings, policy analysts say, would hasten the insolvency of Medicare by eight years — to 2016, the final year of the next presidential term, from 2024. While Republicans have raised legitimate questions about the long-term feasibility of the reimbursement cuts, analysts say, to restore them in the short term would immediately add hundreds of dollars a year to out-of-pocket Medicare expenses for beneficiaries. That would violate Mr. Romney's vow that neither current beneficiaries nor Americans within 10 years of eligibility would be affected by his proposal to shift Medicare to a voucherlike system in

Affordable Care Act Ends "Overpayments" To Private Medicare Advantage Plans

The Law Does Not End Medicare Advantage. From PolitiFact: "The health care law includes $136 billion in projected savings that would come from changes to the Medicare Advantage program -- a privately run, Medicare-funded plan akin to managed care health insurance. [...] There's no question that Medicare Advantage is taking a disproportionate share of the cuts made by the new law. But 'destroying' is too strong a word -- few doubt that Medicare Advantage will continue to exist and draw beneficiaries. And these savings need to be taken in some context." [PolitiFact.com, 3/22/12]

Medicare Advantage Is A Private Alternative To Traditional Medicare. According to the Kaiser Family Foundation: "Since the 1970s, Medicare beneficiaries have had the option to receive their Medicare benefits through private health plans, mainly health maintenance organizations (HMOs), as an alternative to the federally administered fee-for-service Medicare program. The Balanced Budget Act (BBA) of 1997 named Medicare's managed care program 'Medicare+Choice' and the Medicare Modernization Act (MMA) of 2003 renamed it 'Medicare Advantage.'" [KFF.org, November 2011]

New England Journal Of Medicine*: Affordable Care Act Eliminates "Substantial Overpayments" To Medicare Advantage Plans. From an article by Robert A. Berenson in The New England Journal of Medicine: "[T]he currently projected savings come from two main sources:

reduced payments to private Medicare Advantage plans and reduced payment updates for hospitals and most other providers. A phased elimination of the substantial overpayments to Medicare Advantage plans, which now enroll nearly 25% of Medicare beneficiaries, will produce an estimated $132 billion in savings over 10 years... The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) has been calling for such fee reductions for years, to keep Medicare Advantage from undermining traditional Medicare. The ACA also produces nearly $200 billion in savings by assuming that providers can improve their productivity as firms in other industries have done. On the basis of this presumed improvement, the law reduces Medicare's annual 'market basket' updates for most types of providers -- a provision that has generated controversy." [The New England Journal of Medicine, 7/8/10]

"Overpayments" To Medicare Advantage Drive Up Premiums For Medicare Beneficiaries. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "In 2010, Medicare is estimated to pay private Medicare Advantage health plans between 9 and 13 percent more per enrollee than it costs to cover the same person under traditional Medicare. These overpayments, which average more than $1,100 for each Medicare Advantage beneficiary, cost Medicare nearly $44 billion between 2004 and 2009. Despite insurers' claims, a large portion of the overpayments benefit insurers rather than provide additional benefits to enrollees. For example, the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) has found that among private fee-for-service plans — one type of Medicare Advantage plan — less than one-fourth of overpayments go toward additional benefits, on average. [...] By increasing Medicare costs, these overpayments also drive up premiums for the 31 million seniors and people with disabilities enrolled in traditional Medicare — by $86 for a couple in 2009. In addition, the overpayments weaken Medicare's long-term finances. [CBPP.org, 7/27/10, internal citations removed]

Affordable Care Act Reduces "Heftier Payments" To Private Medicare Advantage Plans. From FactCheck.org: "Whatever you want to call them, it's a $500 billion reduction in the growth of future spending over 10 years, not a slashing of the current Medicare budget or benefits. It's true that those who get their coverage through Medicare Advantage's private plans (about 22 percent of Medicare enrollees) would see fewer add-on benefits; the bill aims to reduce the heftier payments made by the government to Medicare Advantage plans, compared with regular fee-for-service Medicare." [FactCheck.org, 3/19/10]

Medicare Board Tasked With Finding Additional Savings Is Forbidden From Cutting Benefits

ACA Establishes An Independent, Senate-Confirmed Board (IPAB) To Find Additional Savings. As explained by the Kaiser Family Foundation: "The 2010 health reform law (the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, also referred to as the ACA) establishes a new Independent Payment Advisory Board (IPAB) with authority to issue recommendations to reduce the growth in Medicare spending, and provides for the Board's recommendations to be considered by Congress and implemented by the Administration on a fast-track basis. [...]As authorized by the health reform law, IPAB is an independent board housed in the executive branch and composed of 15 full-time members appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. [Kaiser Family Foundation, April 2011]

IPAB Proposals Will Be Implemented Unless Congress Finds Alternative Savings Or Supermajority Overturns Them. According to the Washington Post: "Beginning with fiscal 2015, if Medicare is projected to grow too quickly, the IPAB will make binding recommendations to reduce spending. Those recommendations will be sent to Capitol Hill at the beginning of each year, and if Congress doesn't like them, it must pass alternative cuts — of the same size — by August. A supermajority of the Senate can also vote to amend the IPAB [spending] recommendations. If Congress fails to act, the secretary of Health and Human Services is required to implement the cuts by default." [Washington Post, 5/8/11]

IPAB Cannot Recommend "Changes In Premiums, Benefits, Eligibility And Taxes." According to the Kaiser Family Foundation: "The Board is prohibited from recommending changes that would reduce payments to certain providers before 2020, and is also prohibited from recommending changes in premiums, benefits, eligibility and taxes, or other changes that would result in rationing." [Kaiser Family Foundation, April 2011]

PolitiFact: "The Law Specifically States That The Board Cannot Ration Care." According to PolitiFact, "Actually, the law specifically states that the board cannot ration care. The board doesn't look at individual patients or deny individual treatments. Instead, it makes system-wide recommendations to rein in the future growth of Medicare spending, and it makes those recommendations within limited parameters. It also was created to stop runaway spending growth within the Medicare program itself, not to divert money to other budget items." [PolitiFact.com, 3/12/12]

U.S. Chamber Of Commerce: "PA Senate – Bob Casey"

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce accuses Sen. Bob Casey (D-PA) of "voting against western Pennsylvania" by supporting the health care law, a cap-and-trade bill, and EPA regulations designed to cut down on toxic air pollution. But the Affordable Care Act doesn't, as the ad suggests, cut any money out of Medicare's current budget. The estimate of job losses the ad cites for the cap-and-trade law comes from the right-wing Heritage Foundation, and the EPA's air toxics regulations would prevent an estimated 11,000 premature deaths per year.

Job-Loss Estimate For Cap-And-Trade Bill Comes From Right-Wing Heritage Foundation

The ad cites CQ Vote #145 on June 6, 2008, in which the Senate rejected cloture on the Boxer Amendment to S. 3036, the Lieberman-Warner Climate Security Act of 2008.

The Ad's Job-Loss Estimate Is Based On A Heritage Foundation Report. The ad cites a May 21, 2008, Heritage Foundation report that estimates Pennsylvania would lose jobs under a version of the Lieberman-Warner Climate Security Act. [Heritage.org, 5/21/08]

Analysis Suggested A Cap-And-Trade Policy Would Impact Jobs Far Less Than Other Forces Already At Play. From an Environmental Defense Fund analysis of five models used to predict the impacts of climate change legislation: "We stated that addressing global warming will not be free. What is more surprising is how affordable it will be – even if we take ambitious steps to curb our emissions. The guidance offered by models strongly suggests that the impact of climate policy will be a far less significant factor than other dynamic forces that drive jobs and growth. The bottom line from these economic forecasts is that any drag on the economy from climate policy will be insignificant, and very possibly too small to measure." [EDF.org, 2008]

CAP: "Climate Security Act Would Create Tens Of Thousands Of New Clean-Energy Jobs" And Protect Current Energy Jobs Against Offshoring. From the Center for American Progress: "The Climate Security Act would create tens of thousands of new clean-energy jobs. In addition to making clean energy more economically attractive, the bill would invest billions of dollars in efficiency and renewables. The bill includes $150 billion for renewable energy investments alone. If this sum were equally divided into $50 billion each for investments in wind, concentrated solar, and geothermal, we estimate that by 2050 it would generate a total of 81 billion kilowatt-hours of wind-powered electricity, which could power approximately 7.7 million homes and create 42,000 jobs; 52 billion kWh of concentrated solar electricity, which could power about 5 million homes and create 5,600 jobs; and 131 billion kWh of geothermal electricity, which could power about 12.4 million homes and create 71,000 jobs. The bill would also protect workers in high carbon-emitting fields from losing their jobs overseas to nations that do not reduce their global warming pollution. The Climate Security Act includes a provision that would require imports from nations that do not have a comparable system of greenhouse gas reductions to pay an excess emissions penalty after 2015." [AmericanProgress.org, 5/30/08]

Projections Suggested Climate Change Policy Would Have Little Impact On Household Budgets. From an Environmental Defense Fund analysis of five models used to predict the impacts of climate change legislation: "[W]hile climate policy is expected to raise electricity bills somewhat, the effect is fairly modest. Over the period 2010-2030, the median projected increase in the average household electricity budget relative to business as usual, across all of these models considered here, turns out to be the EIA's forecast—just $3.30 a month, or about 3.5%. (The average projected increase is $3.15.) Moreover, the electricity bills implied by all of the models fall well within the range of recent experience. For example, the most recent analysis of the Lieberman-Warner bill (by RTI) suggests that households would spend about the same amount on electricity under climate policy, in real terms, as they did in 2005." [EDF.org, 2008]

Sen. Brown Supported Environmental Standards Projected To Save Thousands Of Lives Every Year

The ad's claim that Casey "voted to support the EPA regulations that will cripple our coal industry" cites Roll Call Vote #139 on June 20, 2012, in which the Senate rejected a resolution disapproving the EPA's Mercury and Air Toxic Standards, and a Forbes.com op-ed from a senior fellow at the conservative Competitive Enterprise Institute.

EPA Estimates Mercury Rule Will Prevent "Up To 11,000 Premature Deaths" Per Year.
According to FactCheck.org: "The EPA's Mercury Air Toxics Standards for the first time will regulate heavy metal emissions at coal-fired power plants, which produce the largest amount of mercury in the air. The EPA finalized the rule in December under the Clean Air Act, giving the industry until 2015 to comply. The agency says the rule will prevent each year up to 11,000 premature deaths, 4,700 heart attacks and more than 500,000 sick days. The EPA says the associated health benefits will be worth $37 billion to $90 billion a year."

American Crossroads accuses Senate candidate Rep. Joe Donnelly (D-IN) of "voting for Barack Obama's agenda," pointing to the health care reform law and a 2009 budget vote. Contrary to the ad's claims, however, the Affordable Care Act doesn't "cut" Medicare, and while the budget Donnelly supported letting Bush tax cuts expire for top earners, few of those in the top brackets are actual small businesses.

Donnelly Voted For A Plan To Let Tax Breaks For Top Earners Expire

The ad cites CQ Vote #216 on April 29, 2009, in which the House passed a budget plan for fiscal year 2010.

House And Senate Passed Non-Binding Budget Outline Similar To Obama's Proposal. From the Associated Press: "Acting with unusual speed, the House on Wednesday adopted a $3.4 trillion budget outline that endorses much of President Barack Obama's ambitious agenda while permitting the national debt to continue to spiral higher. [...] The budget measure is a nonbinding outline for follow-up tax and spending legislation. It is Congress' response to Obama's $3.6 trillion budget plan released in late February." [Associated Press via RealClearPolitics.com, 4/29/09]

• Budget Outline Proposed To Let Tax Cuts Expire For Top Earners. From PBS: "The $3.5 trillion plan is a nonbinding guideline for how to spend federal money and where that money will come from. [...] The budget includes money for energy, education and includes money for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. The plan also raises the tax rate on Americans making more than $200,000 a year, after 2010. It maintains tax cuts for middle class taxpayers put in place by President George W. Bush, according to the Associated Press." [PBS.org, 10/30/09]

Obama's 2009 Budget Proposed Using Additional Revenue From Corporations And The Wealthy To Fund New Investment. From the Washington Post: "President Obama delivered to Congress yesterday a $3.6 trillion spending plan that would finance vast new investments in health care, energy independence and education by raising taxes on the oil and gas industry, hedge fund managers, multinational corporations and nearly 3 million of the nation's top earners. The blueprint, meanwhile, would overhaul programs across the federal bureaucracy to strengthen assistance for millions of people who have borne the consequences of what Obama called 'an era of profound irresponsibility,' helping them pay for college, train for better jobs and save for retirement while taking less of their earnings in taxes." [Washington Post, 2/27/09]

Around Half Of "Tax Hikes" In Obama's Budget Proposal Came From Letting Bush Tax Cuts Expire On Top Brackets. From the Washington Post: "Of the $1.3 trillion in new taxes Obama proposes to levy over the next decade, about half would be generated by simply letting the Bush tax cuts expire for high earners." [Washington Post, 3/7/09]

Obama's Budget Proposal Cut Taxes For Middle And Lower Classes. From USA Today: "President Obama's sweeping budget outline, released Thursday, would raise taxes on the wealthy as it offers a range of cash-saving initiatives for the middle and lower classes. It touches broadly on the typical household budget — from retirement savings and health care costs to college tuition. The plan 'means a lot of good news for both middle-class families who have been struggling to keep their heads above water and now are in danger of sinking, as well as working-class and lower-class Americans whose heads haven't been above water for some time,' says William Galston senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, a research and public policy institute." Few Top Income Taxpayers Are Actual "Small Businesses"

CBPP: "Only 2.5 Percent Of Small Business Owners Face The Top Two Rates." According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "Allowing the top two marginal tax rates to return to pre-2001 levels as scheduled next year would affect very few small businesses, a recent Treasury Department study found. The study shows that only 2.5 percent of small business owners face the top two rates." [Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 7/19/12, internal citations removed]

• Conservatives Rely On Definition Of "Small Business" That Counts President Obama And Mitt Romney. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "The claims that allowing the Bush tax cuts for high-income people to expire would seriously harm small businesses rest on an exceedingly broad, and misleading, definition of 'small business.' The definition is so broad, in fact, that under it, both President Obama and Governor Romney would count as small business owners — as would 237 of the nation's 400 wealthiest people." [Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 7/19/12, internal citations removed]

• Conservative Definition Of "Small Businesses" Includes Multi-Billion-Dollar Corporations Like Bechtel And PricewaterhouseCoopers. According to the Center for American Progress: "'That's 750,000 small businesses in America, the most productive, the ones that are the most successful, getting hit by a tax increase on top of everything else that's happened to them in the last 18 months of this administration,' said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY). But McConnell's number is only accurate if you take an incredibly expansive view of what constitutes a small business. Included in that 750,000 is the Bechtel Corporation, the largest engineering firm in the country. It is the fifth-largest privately owned company in the United States, posting gross revenue in 2008 of $31.4 billion. [...] The auditing firm PricewaterhouseCoopers, which has operations in more than 150 countries, fits the bill as well." [Center for American Progress, 10/21/10, emphasis added]

• Former Bush Economist Alan Viard: GOP's Definition Of Small Businesses Is A "Fallacy." As reported by the Washington Post: "Which is why Republicans continually define pass-through entities of all sizes as small businesses, a position [former Bush White House economist Alan] Viard called a 'fallacy.' 'How can it be that 3 percent of owners are accounting for 50 percent of small business income? Those firms they're owning can't be all that small,' Viard said. 'And that's true. They're very large.'" [Washington Post, 9/17/10]

Joint Committee On Taxation: "3.5 Percent Of All Taxpayers With Net Positive Business Income" Fall Into Top Tax Bracket. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation: The staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that in 2013 approximately 940,000 taxpayers with net positive business income (3.5 percent of all taxpayers with net positive business income) will have marginal rates of 36 or 39.6 percent under the president's proposal, and that 53 percent of the approximately $1.3 trillion of aggregate net positive business income will be reported on returns that have a marginal rate of 36 or 39.6 percent. [Joint Committee On Taxation, 6/18/12]

Those In The Top Bracket Still Benefit From Middle-Income Tax Cuts. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> Furthermore, as Figure 2 shows, under the proposal to allow tax cuts on income above $250,000 ($200,000 for single filers) to expire, taxpayers in the top two brackets would still keep sizeable tax cuts on the first $250,000 of their income ($200,000 for single filers).

American Crossroads: "Debate"

American Crossroads wants to know what it is about President Obama's first term indicates that "another four years would be better" if he wins the election. The answer is simple: Obama inherited an economy that was losing hundreds of thousands of jobs per month, as Americans suffered through the worst downturn since the Great Depression. Today the economy is growing – as evidenced by 4.97 million new private-sector jobs created in the last 32 months – and consumer confidence has climbed to its highest level since February 2008. The ad also blames the Obama's spending for the rising debt, but the real culprits are Bush-era policies and the recession itself, and Republicans have repeatedly blocked Obama's deficit-reduction proposals.

The Economy Is On The Upswing

The Private Sector Has Added 4.97 Million Jobs Over 32 Consecutive Months Of Private-Sector Growth. The following chart shows the monthly change in private-sector jobs dating back to January 2008.

[BLS.gov, accessed 11/2/12; MSNBC.com, 11/2/12]

Latest BLS Benchmark Shows "Net Job Growth...During Obama's First Term." According to the Huffington Post: "The Labor Department on Thursday morning quietly released a new benchmark for payroll employment in the U.S. It turns out that with the revision, there has been net job growth -- not much, but more than nothing -- during Obama's first term. According to the revision, total non-farm payrolls stood at 133.686 million jobs in August, up from 133.561 million in January 2009, when Obama's first term began. Before the revision, payrolls were at 133.300 million in August. In other words, 125,000 jobs have been created, in total, during Obama's first term, compared with a prior estimate of a loss of 261,000." [Huffington Post, 9/27/12]

Consumer Confidence Is Higher Than It Has Been Since February 2008. According to Bloomberg News: "Confidence among American consumers climbed in October to a more than four-year high, which may help drive bigger gains in the largest part of the economy. The Conference Board's sentiment index increased to 72.2, the highest since February 2008, from a revised 68.4 in September, figures from the New York-based private research group showed today. [...] The percent of respondents who say jobs are currently plentiful rose to the highest level since September 2008, indicating that a decline in joblessness is brightening Americans' moods. Lower gasoline prices and a budding housing recovery are also contributing to the improvement in confidence." [Bloomberg News, 11/1/12]

Massive Monthly Job Losses Obama Inherited Have Turned To Steady Private-Sector Growth

Recession Officially Ran From December 2007 To June 2009, Making It The Longest Since World War II. From the National Bureau of Economic Research: "The Business Cycle Dating Committee of the National Bureau of Economic Research met yesterday by conference call. At its meeting, the committee determined that a trough in business activity occurred in the U.S. economy in June 2009. The trough marks the end of the recession that began in December 2007 and the beginning of an expansion. The recession lasted 18 months, which makes it the longest of any recession since World War II. Previously the longest postwar recessions were those of 1973-75 and 1981-82, both of which lasted 16 months. In determining that a trough occurred in June 2009, the committee did not conclude that economic conditions since that month have been favorable or that the economy has returned to operating at normal capacity. Rather, the committee determined only that the recession ended and a recovery began in that month." [NBER.org, 9/20/10]

- Recession Resulted In 8.3 Million Job Losses. According to the Associated Press, "the Great Recession killed 8.3 million jobs, compared with 1.6 million lost in the 2001 recession." [Associated Press via Yahoo! News, 5/4/12]

Bush Recession Was So Severe That Economy Was Still Shedding Over Three-Quarters Of A Million Jobs Per Month Through First Few Months Of President Obama's Term. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the economy shed 839,000 jobs in January 2009, 725,000 in February 2009, 787,000 in March 2009, and 802,000 in April 2009, for a four-month average of 788,250 lost jobs per month. [BLS.gov, accessed 5/3/12]

Since The Recession Ended In June 2009, The Private Sector Has Added 3.8 Million Jobs While Public-Sector Employment Has Fallen By 559,000. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were 107,933,000 private-sector jobs in June 2009, and 111,744,000 private-sector jobs in October 2012, an increase of 3,811,000 jobs. The BLS also reports that there were 22,570,000 Americans working in the public sector in June 2009, and 22,011,000 working in the public sector in October 2012, a decrease of 559,000 jobs. The private-sector gains and public-sector losses add up to a total increase of 3,252,000 jobs.

• Conservative AEI: The Public Sector Has Shrunk, But Private-Sector Growth Is Above Average. From American Enterprise Institute scholar Mark J. Perry: "In the second quarter of 2012, 'public sector GDP' decreased -1.44%, and that was the eighth straight quarter of negative growth for total government spending, averaging -2.88% per quarter over the last two years. In contrast, there have been 12 consecutive quarters of positive growth for private sector GDP averaging 3.07% per quarter in the three years since the recession ended, which is slightly higher than the 2.8% average growth rate in private real GDP over the last 25 years." [AEI-Ideas.org, 7/31/12]

Bush Policies And Recession Caused Debt To Skyrocket

Prior To President Obama's Inauguration, President Bush Had Already Created A Projected $1.2 Trillion Deficit For Fiscal Year 2009. From the Washington Times: "The Congressional Budget Office announced a projected fiscal 2009 deficit of $1.2 trillion even if Congress doesn't enact any new programs. [...] About the only person who was silent on the deficit projection was Mr. Bush, who took office facing a surplus but who saw spending balloon and the country notch the highest deficits on record." [Washington Times, 1/8/09]

NYT*: President Bush's Policy Changes Created Much More Debt Than President Obama's. The New York Times published the following chart comparing the fiscal impact of policies enacted under the Bush and Obama administrations:

[New York Times, 7/24/11]

Recession Added Hundreds Of Billions In Deficits By Increasing Spending On Safety Net While Shrinking Tax Revenue. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP) explains: "When unemployment rises and incomes stagnate in a recession, the federal budget responds automatically: tax collections shrink, and spending goes up for programs like unemployment insurance, Social Security, and Food Stamps." According to CBPP: "The recession battered the budget, driving down tax revenues and swelling outlays for unemployment insurance, food stamps, and other safety-net programs. Using CBO's August 2008 projections as a benchmark, we calculate that the changed economic outlook alone accounts for over $400 billion of the deficit each year in 2009 through 2011 and slightly smaller amounts in subsequent years. Those effects persist; even in 2018, the deterioration in the economy since the summer of 2008 will account for over $300 billion in added deficits, much of it in the form of additional debt-service costs." [CBPP.org, 11/18/10; CBPP.org, 5/10/11, citations removed]

Over The Coming Decade, The Bush Tax Cuts Are The Primary Cause Of Federal Budget Deficits. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities prepared a chart showing the deficit impact of the Bush tax cuts (orange), the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, the recession itself, and spending to rescue the economy:

[CBPP.org, 5/10/11]

CBPP: Bush Tax Cuts And Wars Are Driving The Debt. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> The complementary chart, below, shows that the Bush-era tax cuts and the Iraq and Afghanistan wars — including their associated interest costs — account for almost half of the projected public debt in 2019 (measured as a share of the economy) if we continue current policies.

[Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 5/20/11]

Spending Growth Under Obama Is Low

January 2009 (Pre-Obama): Federal Spending Projected To Spike To $3.5 Trillion Without Any Policy Changes. In January 2009, the Congressional Budget Office projected: "Without changes in current laws and policies, CBO estimates, outlays will rise from $3.0 trillion in 2008 to $3.5 trillion in 2009." [Congressional Budget Office, "The Budget and Economic Outlook: Fiscal Years 2009 to 2019,"January 2009]

Accounting For Inflation And President Obama's Impact On FY 2009, Spending Will Have Grown By Just 1.7 Percent From 2009 To 2012. According to Michael Linden, Director of Tax and Budget Policy at the Center for American Progress:

> [I]n January 2009, before President Obama had even taken office, the Congressional Budget Office projected that federal spending would exceed $3.5 trillion for fiscal year 2009, half a trillion more than the government spent in 2008. Again, that was BEFORE President Obama event took office. It's reasonable to use that number as our best guess at what spending would have been in FY2009 under ANY president. [...]
> Of course, the CBO's projections aren't perfect. They change as the economy changes and as laws change. Fortunately, CBO also tells us in subsequent reports how and why its previous estimates have changed. We can use that to understand how much of the total federal spending in fiscal year 2009 was attributable to legislative changes that occurred AFTER President Obama took office.
> The answer is that out of a total of $3.5 trillion actually spent in FY09, only $165 billion, less than 5 percent, was the result of policy changes signed into law by President Obama.
> In other words, probably the best baseline against which to judge spending under Obama is $3.5 trillion (the amount actually spent in 2009) minus $165 billion (the added amount Obama himself actually approved): $3.35 trillion. This year, the CBO expects that the federal government will spend $3.6 trillion. After accounting for inflation, that's a growth rate of just 1.7 percent. By comparison, and using the exact same methodology, spending in President Bush's first term was up nearly 15 percent. [ThinkProgress.org, 5/25/12]

PolitiFact: Spending Growth Under Obama Is "Second-Slowest" In Recent History. According to PolitiFact: "Obama has indeed presided over the slowest growth in spending of any president [in recent history] using raw dollars, and the growth on his watch was the second-slowest if you adjust for inflation." [PolitiFact.com, 5/23/12]

Republicans Have Opposed President Obama's Deficit-Reduction Efforts

September 2011: Obama Proposed $3 Trillion In Deficit Reduction, "Republicans Swiftly Responded ... With Opposition." According to the Los Angeles Times: "President Obama on Monday made an aggressive pitch for his $3-trillion deficit-reduction strategy, promising to veto any proposal that fails to raise revenues by asking wealthy Americans to 'pay their fair share.' [...] His plan for lopping $3 trillion from the deficit is on top of the approximately $1 trillion in spending cuts that he signed into law in August, after reaching a deal with Republican congressional leaders to lift the nation's debt ceiling. On Monday, Republicans swiftly responded to the president's proposal with opposition. [Los Angeles Times,9/19/11]

April 2011: GOP Rejected Obama Proposal To Reduce Deficits By $4 Trillion. According to the Boston Globe: "President Obama pledged yesterday to pare the projected deficit by $4 trillion in the next 12 years, vowing to protect the nation's most vulnerable while pushing again for higher taxes for its richest citizens. [...] His call for the end of the Bush tax cuts for incomes above $250,000 for couples reignites a ferocious debate from the fall midterm elections. That element of the speech triggered the most vociferous and immediate opposition from Republicans." [Boston Globe, 4/14/11]

American Crossroads: "Consequences"

American Crossroads hits Nebraska Senate candidate Bob Kerrey (D) for opposing a balanced budget amendment and supporting health care reform and cap-and-trade. But current debt levels are due to the recession and Bush-era policies, not to the absence of a constitutional balanced budget amendment, which would make it harder for the government to respond to economic downturns. Kerrey's position on health care is that the law must be amended rather than fully repealed, which would have negative consequences that include kicking millions of people off insurance and forcing seniors to pay more for care. In context, the former senator's remarks on cap-and-trade legislation make it clear that Kerrey views climate change as a moral issue without dismissing its impact on jobs and the economy.

Balanced Budget Amendment Would Worsen Future Economic Downturns

Bartlett: Balanced Budget Amendment "Would Force The Federal Government To Make

Economic Recessions Worse." According to Bruce Bartlett, a former adviser to President Ronald Reagan, in the Fiscal Times: "A BBA would force the federal government to make economic recessions worse. Since federal revenues fall and spending rises automatically in economic downturns, it would force spending cuts and tax increases at precisely the point when the economy is reeling, potentially turning a modest downturn into a depression." [Fiscal Times, 8/27/10]

OMB Watch: "Balanced Budget Amendment Could Impede Economic Recoveries." According to OMB Watch: "While forcing Congress to balance the books through a constitutional mandate may be appealing to many fiscal hawks, a balanced budget amendment could impede economic recoveries following Wall Street meltdowns and other calamities." [OMB Watch, 1/25/11]

Kerrey Supports Making Changes To The Health Care Law

Kerrey: "Fix It, Don't Repeal It." From the New York Times article cited by American Crossroads: "On health care, Mr. Kerrey said he would have voted for the Obama legislation, but he also said he would like to see it changed. 'My position will be fix it, don't repeal it,' he said. 'I prefer not single-payer, but I think you've got to get everyone in the same group. I think the commercial payers can get it done.' He also says that a form of premium support, favored by many Republicans, 'can work with everyone in a single group.'" [New York Times, 4/3/12]

Repeal Would Have Negative Consequences For Millions

Up To 6.6 Million Young Adults Would Lose Health Care Coverage Through Their Parents' Plans. From the Los Angeles Times: "President Obama's healthcare law helped as many as 6.6 million young adults stay on or get on their parents' health plans in the first year and a half after the law was signed, a new survey indicates. [...] Earlier surveys by the federal government found that the number of people ages 19 to 25 without insurance declined after the law was signed, reversing years of erosion in health coverage for young adults." [Los Angeles Times, 6/8/12]

70,000 Americans With Pre-Existing Conditions Would Lose Insurance Coverage. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, as of May 31, 2012, 73,333 people were enrolled in the Pre-Existing Condition Insurance Plan (PCIP) created by the Affordable Care Act. [HealthCare.gov, 7/13/12]

5.2 Million People Would Have To Pay More For Prescription Drugs. From the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid: "As a result of the Affordable Care Act, over 5.2 million seniors and people with disabilities have saved over $3.9 billion on prescription drugs since the law was enacted. The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) also released data today showing that in the first half of 2012, over 1 million people with Medicare saved a total of $687 million on prescription drugs in 'donut hole' coverage gap for an average of $629 in savings this year. [...] Coverage for both brand name and generic drugs in the gap will continue to increase over time until 2020, when the coverage gap will be closed." [CMS.gov, 7/25/12]

Over 35 Million Seniors Would Lose Access To Free Preventive Services. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services [CMS] report that 35,106,598 people were enrolled in Medicare Part B in 2011. CMS also reports:

> Beginning January 1, 2011, the Affordable Care Act eliminated Part B coinsurance and deductibles for recommended preventive services, including many cancer screenings and key immunizations. The law also added an important new service — an Annual Wellness Visit with a health professional — at no cost to beneficiaries.
> According to preliminary numbers, at least 25,720,996 million Americans took advantage of at least one free preventive benefit in Medicare in 2011, including the new Annual Wellness Visit. This represents 73.3% of Medicare fee-for-service beneficiaries, including 2,404,792 African-American beneficiaries, 537,110 Hispanic beneficiaries, 104,393 American Indian beneficiaries, and 508,398 Asian-American beneficiaries. In 2009, Kerrey Said Climate Change Must Be Framed As A "Moral Challenge"

In "Damn The Consequences" Remarks, Kerrey Was Talking About Framing Climate Change Bills In Moral Context, Not Disregarding Impact On Jobs. From remarks Kerrey gave

at the New School's Tishman Auditorium in October 2009:

> My own view is that there's two possibilities in looking at the facts. You either believe after looking at the facts that we have a serious problem on our hands, a very serious problem on our hands that could transform the nature of life on earth, or you don't. And I will say, Bill, I was upset to discover there are some individuals who I had previously regarded as intelligent who are now in the Senate who have reached a conclusion that it isn't a problem.
> But there were also senators in 1964 who had reached the conclusion that Jim Crow laws weren't a problem when civil rights was being debated that summer. I noted that the civil rights legislation of '64 and voting rights legislation of '65 were an even larger interference in the market than climate change legislation. There was substantial interference with almost everything that was going on in the United States of America at the time. It transformed the workplace, it transformed education, but it was a major interference on the part of the federal government, and you either believed that the discrimination that was in place at the time was wrong or you didn't. And if you believed it was wrong, you voted in the affirmative, and if you believed that it wasn't wrong, you voted no.
> My view of climate change and climate change legislation that comes out of identifying that as a problem has to be considered in the same fashion. If you believe it's a problem and a moral challenge, you have to vote in the affirmative. You do not want history to record that you voted no. When I was in the Senate I knew members of the Senate who were there in 1964 who had voted no on civil rights because they represented southern states, and they have never permanently got over it. They are ashamed of the fact that they voted no on civil rights. And when I talk to members of the Senate, that's what I say. I think if you vote in the negative you will likewise, the older you get, you will look back on that negative vote and you will be ashamed of that vote.
> So unless, in my view, it is framed in that kind of moral context, it's very difficult to get into the economic development argument that you can create more jobs than are likely to be destroyed. I happen to believe that you can, with the right investment strategy. But I don't think it rings the bell sufficiently given the current economic conditions to get people finally to say, 'Damn the consequences, I'm going to vote yes.' [Bob Kerrey Remarks via YouTube.com, 10/22/09]

2009 And 2010 Climate Change Bills Would Have Boosted The Economy At Minimal Cost To Consumers

Senate Version Of Cap-And-Trade Estimated By EPA To Have "Relatively Modest [Economic] Impact" On Households. From the Christian Science Monitor: "A stalled climate-energy bill in the Senate got a boost Tuesday from federal regulators who reported it would not be too costly, then from President Obama. [...] The bill, which includes a market-based 'cap and trade' mechanism to put a price on carbon emissions from US smokestack emitters, would hike energy costs for both businesses and consumers. But with rebates for consumers in the plan, as well as other factors, the overall cost to American households would be $79 to $146 annually, the EPA found. The American Power Act would have 'a relatively modest impact on US consumers,' assuming that the 'bulk of revenues from the program are returned to households lump-sum,' the study's authors wrote. The EPA also found that the cost to polluting businesses, such as coal-fired utilities, would not be too onerous. The cost to them to purchase allowances from the government for each ton of emissions was projected to be $16 to $17 per metric ton of greenhouse gases by 2013 and $23 to $24 per ton by 2020." [Christian Science Monitor, 6/16/10]

• Senate Bill Would Protect Low-Income Consumers Against Higher Energy Bills. From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "Like the climate-change bill the House passed last year, the Kerry-Lieberman proposal includes a program of direct payments ("energy refunds") for low-income households. The refunds would protect the typical household in the poorest 20 percent of the population from incurring a financial loss as a result of the policies necessary to reduce greenhouse-gas emissions. (The bottom 20 percent consists of households with incomes below roughly 150 percent of the poverty line, or about $33,000 for a family of four.) The proposal also includes a smaller refundable tax credit for families with modestly higher incomes." [CBPP.org, 5/24/10]

Reuters*: Experts Say House-Passed 2009 Clean Energy Bill Would Have "Only A Modest Impact On Consumers." According to Reuters: "A new U.S. government study on Tuesday adds to a growing list of experts concluding that climate legislation moving through Congress would have only a modest impact on consumers, adding around $100 to household costs in 2020. Under the climate legislation passed by the House of Representatives in June, electricity, heating oil and other bills for average families will rise $134 in 2020 and $339 in 2030, according to the Energy Information Administration, the country's top energy forecaster. The EIA estimate was in line with earlier projections from the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office which said average families would pay about $175 extra annually by 2020, and the Environmental Protection Agency, which said families would pay at most an extra $1 per day." [Reuters, 8/5/09]

- CBO Estimated Cost Of ACES In 2020 Would Be $175 Per Household Per Year. From the Congressional Budget Office: '"Although the analysis examines the effects of the bill as it would apply in 2020, those effects are described in the context of the current economy that is, the costs that would result if the policies set for 2020 were in effect in 2010. On that basis, CBO estimates that the net annual economywide cost of the cap-and-trade program in 2020 would be $22 billion or about $175 per household." [CBO.gov, 6/20/09]

- CBO: Energy Costs Would Actually Decrease For Low-Income Households. According to the Congressional Budget Office's analysis of the American Clean Energy and Security Act, if the bill were implemented, "households in the lowest income quintile would see an average net benefit of about $40 in 2020, while households in the highest income quintile would see a net cost of $245." [CBO.gov, 6/19/09]

Study: Clean Energy Legislation Would Create Jobs, Boost GDP. According to an analysis by the University of California, Berkley: "Comprehensive clean energy and climate protection legislation, like the American Clean Energy and Security Act (ACES) that was passed by the House of Representatives in June, would strengthen the U.S. economy by establishing pollution limits and incentives that together will drive large-scale investments in clean energy and energy efficiency. These investments will result in stronger job growth, higher real household income, and increased economic output than the U.S. would experience without the bill. New analysis by the University of California shows conclusively that climate policy will strengthen the U.S. economy as a whole. Full adoption of the ACES package of pollution reduction and energy efficiency measures would create between 918,000 and 1.9 million new jobs, increase annual household income by $487-$1,175 per year, and boost GDP by $39 billion-$111 billion. These economic gains are over and above the growth the U.S. would see in the absence of such a bill." [University of California, Berkeley, accessed 5/14/12]

Crossroads GPS: "No Clue"

An ad from Crossroads GPS nonsensically attacks New Mexico Senate candidate Rep. Martin Heinrich both for too much spending and for a vote that may result in spending cuts. In reality, it was the recession and policies like the Bush tax cuts – both rounds of which Heinrich's opponent voted for – that drove up debt. The automatic spending cuts are looming thanks to Republicans' refusal to compromise on deficit reduction; when Heinrich voted for the last-minute deal that imposed those cuts as an incentive for a super committee to find compromise on deficit reduction, his primary concern was raising the debt limit and avoiding the economic catastrophe that would have resulted from default.

Bush Policies And Recession Caused Debt To Skyrocket

Prior To President Obama's Inauguration, President Bush Had Already Created A Projected $1.2 Trillion Deficit For Fiscal Year 2009. From the Washington Times: "The Congressional Budget Office announced a projected fiscal 2009 deficit of $1.2 trillion even if Congress doesn't enact any new programs. [...] About the only person who was silent on the deficit projection was Mr. Bush, who took office facing a surplus but who saw spending balloon and the country notch the highest deficits on record." NYT*: President Bush's Policy Changes Created Much More Debt Than President Obama's. The New York Times published the following chart comparing the fiscal impact of policies enacted under the Bush and Obama administrations:

Recession Added Hundreds Of Billions In Deficits By Increasing Spending On Safety Net While Shrinking Tax Revenue. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP) explains: "When unemployment rises and incomes stagnate in a recession, the federal budget responds automatically: tax collections shrink, and spending goes up for programs like unemployment insurance, Social Security, and Food Stamps." According to CBPP: "The recession battered the budget, driving down tax revenues and swelling outlays for unemployment insurance, food stamps, and other safety-net programs. Using CBO's August 2008 projections as a benchmark, we calculate that the changed economic outlook alone accounts for over $400 billion of the deficit each year in 2009 through 2011 and slightly smaller amounts in subsequent years. Those effects persist; even in 2018, the deterioration in the economy since the summer of 2008 will account for over $300 billion in added deficits, much of it in the form of additional debt-service costs." Heinrich Supported Deal To Avoid Default But Wants To Avoid Sequestration

Heinrich Voted To Avoid Default But Wants To Find A Way To Avoid Sequestration. From the Albuquerque Journal: "The legislation referenced in the ad would not immediately eliminate jobs in New Mexico, but could result in job losses if Congress fails to reach a deficit-reduction deal by the end of the year, according to an analysis done at the University of New Mexico. The bill Heinrich voted for stemmed from a congressional stalemate in 2011 on increasing the nation's debt limit and avoiding a default. The legislation adopted by Congress, which Heinrich supported, established so-called 'sequestration' rules that would reduce the federal deficit by $1.2 trillion in the absence of a broader budget deal. The cuts would apply to defense and nondefense spending over the next 10 years. Heinrich has said he hopes Congress can reach a deal to avoid sequestration and job cuts, but averting default on the federal debt and a national fiscal crisis was his overriding concern at the time of the vote. A federal analysis found that sequestration could cut nearly $400 million for nuclear work in New Mexico next year, including Sandia and Los Alamos national labs and the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad. Lee Reynis, head of the University of New Mexico's Bureau of Business and Economic Research, conducted an analysis of the sequestration bill last year and found that, if enacted, the cuts could cost about 20,000 New Mexicans their jobs." [Albuquerque Journal, 11/1/12]

The Federal Budget Control Act Was A Last-Minute Deal To Raise The Debt Ceiling That Also Created The Deficit Reduction Super Committee. From PolitiFact: "Last year, the United States government was reaching its legal debt limit, which meant Congress had to authorize a higher level for borrowing. Raising the debt limit (also called the debt ceiling) was in some ways symbolic: Congress has the power of the purse, and the decisions to spend the money had already been made. In prior administrations, Congress approved higher debt limits with some partisan sniping (including from then-Sen. Obama against President George W. Bush) but without too much fuss. But in the summer of 2011, House Republicans insisted that actual spending cuts go along with an increase to the debt limit. House Speaker John Boehner led negotiations with the Obama White House, and at first the two sides seemed to be moving toward a wide-ranging overhaul of the federal budget, referred to in the media as a 'grand bargain.' The closed-door negotiations fell apart, though. [...] Republicans and Democrats came to a less ambitious agreement to raise the debt limit through the Budget Control Act of 2011. The law found approximately $1.2 trillion in budget cuts spread over 10 years. But it also directed Congress to find another $1.2 trillion through a Joint Select Committee on Deficit Reduction. This 12-member committee became known as 'the super-committee.'" [PolitiFact.com, 9/21/12]

- Debt Ceiling Deal Imposed Harsh Defense Cuts Triggered By Super Committee's Failure As Incentive For Success. From the Associated Press: "The deal between House Republicans, the Democratic-controlled Senate and the OK of the White House, came hours before the deadline for raising the amount of money the government can borrow. As an incentive, the agreement prescribes draconian cuts both parties would find unpalatable — $487 billion to defense over 10 years plus $492 billion in automatic cuts if a bipartisan congressional 'super committee' [failed to come up] with $1.2 trillion in savings. The committee failed." [Associated Press via SFGate.com, 7/24/12]

- Failure To Raise Debt Ceiling Could Have Resulted In Default Or Had Other Severe Economic Consequences. From CNNMoney: "A failure to raise the debt ceiling would likely send shockwaves through the underpinnings of the financial system -- and possibly ripple out to individual investors and consumers. The federal government would be forced to prioritize its payments. It would risk defaulting on its financial obligations. And if that happens, credit rating agencies would downgrade U.S. debt." [Money.CNN.com, 7/21/11]

The Deficit Panel Failed Because Conservative Lawmakers Refused To Compromise

Deficit-Reduction Committee Failed After Republican Members Refused To Budge On Tax Cuts For The Wealthiest Americans. According to the Los Angeles Times: "The committee faced a Wednesday deadline to vote on a proposal to slash the nation's deficits by $1.5 trillion over the decade. The panel that was brought into existence as a result of the summer debt ceiling fight spent three months in mostly secret negotiations. A deal needed to be posted by Monday evening to provide a 48-hour review. But Republicans and Democrats were unable to compromise on the tax and spending issues that have divided Congress all year, punting the debate to next year's presidential and congressional campaigns. Republicans refused to substantially raise taxes and wanted to cut federal deficits largely by reducing spending on Medicare and other domestic programs. Democrats wanted a more equal balance of new taxes and spending cuts -- a level of taxation the GOP could not accept. A focal point in final days became the George W. Bush-era tax cuts, which are scheduled to expire in December 2012. Republicans wanted to extend those tax breaks for the wealthy and other Americans, rather than carve into that source of new revenue. Most Republican members of Congress have signed an anti-tax pledge with conservative activist Grover Norquist, and were hesitant to agree to new taxes. [Los Angeles Times, 11/21/11]

American Crossroads: "Silent"

American Crossroads blames Montana Sen. Jon Tester (D) for debt that was caused by the recession and policies like the Bush tax cuts, both rounds of which his opponent supported. The ad cites a series of votes to prove its point, but the votes were primarily on bills to prop up a floundering housing market and economy or to raise the debt ceiling, a maneuver that doesn't authorize new spending but does prevent the economic catastrophe that would result from defaulting on our obligations.

Tester's Votes Were To Prop Up Economy And Avoid The Economic Catastrophe Of Failure To Raise Debt Ceiling

To support its claim that Tester "voted for $6 trillion in new debt," the ad cites Vote #142 on June 4, 2008; Vote #186 on 7/26/08; Vote #64 on February 13, 2009; Vote #397 on December 24, 2009; Vote #14 on January 28, 2010; Vote #123 on August 2, 2011; Vote #105 on March 25, 2010; and the Washington Examiner on March 13, 2012.

Tester Voted To For A Bill To Prop Up The Housing Market

Vote #186 on July 26, 2008, was the Foreclosure Prevention Act of 2008.

Foreclosure Prevention Act Was Designed To Help People Avoid Losing Their Homes And Help Faltering Housing Market. From the Los Angeles Times: "Congress sent President Bush legislation Saturday designed to help homeowners avoid foreclosure, spur home buying and prop up struggling mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The president intends to sign the bill as soon as he receives it. It is the government's most sweeping response yet to the nation's housing crisis. [...] The bill passed Saturday, the American Housing Rescue and Foreclosure Prevention Act, contains a key provision allowing the Federal Housing Administration to guarantee up to $300 billion in lower-cost mortgages -- provided that lenders accept significant losses. The provision is expected to help at least 400,000 homeowners." [Los Angeles Times, 7/27/08]

Foreclosure Prevention Act Also Bolstered Fannie And Freddie. From CNNMoney: "To help stabilize markets, which were shaken in the past few weeks by steep declines in the stock prices of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, Treasury Secretary Paulson asked Congress on July 13 to give the Treasury power to provide a liquidity and capital 'backstop' for the two companies. Fannie and Freddie guarantee the purchase and trade of mortgages and own or back $5.2 trillion in mortgages. The bill allows Treasury over the next 18 months to offer Fannie and Freddie an unlimited line of credit and the authority to buy stock in the companies if necessary." [Money.CNN.com, 7/24/08, stock market tags removed]

Foreclosure Prevention Act Passed The House With Bipartisan Support And Was Signed Into Law By President Bush. The Foreclosure Prevention Act of 2008 passed 272-152, with 227 Democrats and 45 Republicans voting "aye." President George W. Bush signed it into law. [H.R. 3221, Vote #519, 7/23/08; Money.CNN.com, 7/30/08]

Tester Voted For The Recovery Act, Which Created Jobs, Boosted GDP, And Cut Taxes

Vote #64 on February 13, 2009, was for H.R. 1, the Recovery Act.

Recovery Act "Succeeded In...Protecting The Economy During The Worst Of The Recession." From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "A new Congressional Budget Office (CBO) report estimates that the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) increased the number of people employed by between 200,000 and 1.5 million jobs in March. In other words, between 200,000 and 1.5 million people employed in March owed their jobs to the Recovery Act. [...] ARRA succeeded in its primary goal of protecting the economy during the worst of the recession. The CBO report finds that ARRA's impact on jobs peaked in the third quarter of 2010, when up to 3.6 million people owed their jobs to the Recovery Act. Since then, the Act's job impact has gradually declined as the economy recovers and certain provisions expire." [CBPP.org, 5/29/12]

At Its Peak, Recovery Act Was Responsible For Up To 3.6 Million Jobs. According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office:

> CBO estimates that ARRAs [sic] policies had the following effects in the third quarter of calendar year 2010:
> • They raised real (inflation-adjusted) gross domestic product by between 1.4 percent and 4.1 percent,
> • Lowered the unemployment rate by between 0.8 percentage points and 2.0 percentage points,
> • Increased the number of people employed by between 1.4 million and 3.6 million, and
> • Increased the number of full-time-equivalent (FTE) jobs by 2.0 million to 5.2 million compared with what would have occurred otherwise. (Increases in FTE jobs include shifts from part-time to full-time work or overtime and are thus generally larger than increases in the number of employed workers). [CBO.gov, 11/24/10]

Recovery Act Included $288 Billion In Tax Cuts. From PolitiFact: "Nearly a third of the cost of the stimulus, $288 billion, comes via tax breaks to individuals and businesses. The tax cuts include a refundable credit of up to $400 per individual and $800 for married couples; a temporary increase of the earned income tax credit for disadvantaged families; and an extension of a program that allows businesses to recover the costs of capital expenditures faster than usual. The tax cuts aren't so much spending as money the government won't get -- so it can stay in the economy." [PolitiFact.com, 2/17/10]

Tester Voted To Raise The Debt Limit And Avoid Default

Vote #397 on December 24, 2009, was for H.R. 4314, a bill that raised the federal debt limit. Vote #14 on January 28, 2010, was on H.J. Res. 45, an increase in the debt ceiling. Vote #123 on August 2, 2011 was on the Budget Control Act of 2011.

H.R. 4314 Raised The Debt Limit Enough To Get Through Mid-February 2010. From CNNMoney: "The House on Wednesday narrowly passed a $290 billion increase to the amount of debt the Treasury is allowed to have. Currently, the debt ceiling is set at $12.104 trillion, and if the Senate passes the House-approved increase, it would rise to $12.394 trillion. The increase would cover Treasury's borrowing needs through Feb. 11, 2010. That is a far cry from the $1.9 trillion increase that lawmakers last week said they wanted to pass. [...] As of Tuesday, the amount of debt subject to the limit on Treasury's books was $12.016 trillion. If the debt ceiling isn't increased by the end of this year, the nation could default on its debt. That would unleash a chain of events that could devalue U.S. bonds and seriously harm the nation's reputation with creditors around the world. In short, it's not something lawmakers can afford to let happen." [Money.CNN.com, 12/16/09]

H.J.Res. 45 Raised Debt Limit Enough To Get Through Early 2011. From the New York Times: "The Senate voted on Thursday to raise the nation's debt limit to $14.3 trillion, a $1.9 trillion increase that would allow the government to keep borrowing to cover operations beyond the November election and into early next year. The measure, which is always politically unpopular but essential to avoid default, needed 60 votes to pass and got not a vote more, for a 60-to-39 tally. The House is expected to pass the measure next week." [New York Times, 1/28/10]

The Federal Budget Control Act Was A Last-Minute Deal To Raise The Debt Ceiling That Also Created The Deficit Reduction Super Committee. From PolitiFact: "Last year, the United States government was reaching its legal debt limit, which meant Congress had to authorize a higher level for borrowing. Raising the debt limit (also called the debt ceiling) was in some ways symbolic: Congress has the power of the purse, and the decisions to spend the money had already been made. This 12-member committee became known as 'the super-committee.'" [PolitiFact.com, 9/21/12]

Failure To Raise The Debt Limit Could Have Had Severe Economic Consequences

Debt Ceiling Does Not Determine U.S.' Debt Level; It Is "A Limit On The Ability Of The Federal Government To Pay Obligations Already Incurred." According to the Government Accountability Office: "The debt limit does not control or limit the ability of the federal government to run deficits or incur obligations. Rather, it is a limit on the ability to pay obligations already incurred. While debates surrounding the debt limit may raise awareness about the federal government's current debt trajectory and may also provide Congress with an opportunity to debate the fiscal policy decisions driving that trajectory, the ability to have an immediate effect on debt levels is limited" [GAO.gov, 2/22/11]

Failure To Raise Debt Ceiling Could Have Resulted In Default Or Had Other Severe Economic Consequences. From CNNMoney: "A failure to raise the debt ceiling would likely send shockwaves through the underpinnings of the financial system -- and possibly ripple out to individual investors and consumers. The federal government would be forced to prioritize its payments. It would risk defaulting on its financial obligations. And if that happens, credit rating agencies would downgrade U.S. debt." [Money.CNN.com, 7/21/11]

Debt Limit Has Been Raised Over 90 Times Since 1940. From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "Before World War I, Congress generally had to approve each separate issuance of federal debt. Since then, the limit has evolved into an overall dollar cap on the amount of debt the federal government can incur. Since 1940, Congress has enacted 91 separate increases in the statutory debt limit, an average of one every nine months (though individual increases lasted anywhere from three days to eight years)." Affordable Care Act Reduces The Deficit

Vote #105 on March 25, 2010, was on H.R. 4872, the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act, a companion to the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

CBO: The Affordable Care Act Will Reduce Deficits By Over $200 Billion From 2012-2021. According to Congressional Budget Office Director Douglas Elmendorf's testimony before the House on March 30, 2011: "CBO and JCT's most recent comprehensive estimate of the budgetary impact of PPACA and the Reconciliation Act was in relation to an estimate prepared for H.R. 2, the Repealing the Job-Killing Health Care Law Act, as passed by the House of Representatives on January 19, 2011. H.R. 2 would repeal the health care provisions of those laws. CBO and JCT estimated that repealing PPACA and the health-related provisions of the Reconciliation Act would produce a net increase in federal deficits of $210 billion over the 2012–2021 period as a result of changes in direct spending and revenues. Reversing the sign of the estimate released in February provides an approximate estimate of the impact over that period of enacting those provisions. Therefore, CBO and JCT effectively estimated in February that PPACA and the health-related provisions of the Reconciliation Act will produce a net decrease in federal deficits of $210 billion over the 2012–2021 period as a result of changes in direct spending and revenues." ["CBO's Analysis of the Major Health Care Legislation Enacted in March 2010," CBO.gov, 3/30/11]

$1.8 Trillion Is Outdated Estimate Of Cost Of Insurance Provisions – Not ACA's Impact On The Deficit

March 2012: CBO Estimates ACA "Provisions Related To Insurance Coverage" Will Have

"Gross Cost" Of $1.762 Trillion. According to a Congressional Budget Office report titled "Updated Estimates for the Insurance Coverage Provisions of the Affordable Care Act": "This report also presents estimates through fiscal year 2022, because the baseline projection period now extends through that additional year. The ACA's provisions related to insurance coverage are now projected to have a net cost of $1,252 billion over the 2012–2022 period (see Table 2, following the text); that amount represents a gross cost to the federal government of $1,762 billion, offset in part by $510 billion in receipts and other budgetary effects (primarily revenues from penalties and other sources)." [CBO.gov, March 2012, emphasis added]

July 2012: CBO's Updated Estimate For Gross Cost Of ACA Insurance Coverage Provisions Is $1.683 Trillion. According to a Congressional Budget Office Report titled "Estimates for the Insurance Coverage Provisions of the Affordable Care Act Updated for the Recent Supreme Court Decision": "CBO and JCT now estimate that the insurance coverage provisions of the ACA will have a net cost of $1,168 billion over the 2012–2022 period—compared with $1,252 billion projected in March 2012 for that 11-year period. That net cost reflects the following: Gross costs of $1,683 billion for Medicaid, CHIP, tax credits, and other subsidies for the purchase of health insurance through the newly established exchanges (and related costs), and tax credits for small employers. [...] Those gross costs are offset in part by $515 billion in receipts from penalty payments, the new excise tax on high-premium insurance plans, and other budgetary effects (mostly increases in tax revenues stemming from changes in employer-provided insurance coverage)." • July 2012 Report Affirmed Projection That ACA Will Reduce Deficits. According to a Congressional Budget Office Report titled "Estimates for the Insurance Coverage Provisions of the Affordable Care Act Updated for the Recent Supreme Court Decision": "CBO and JCT have not updated their estimate of the overall budgetary impact of the ACA; previously, they estimated that the law would, on net, reduce budget deficits." Americans for Tax Reform: "Wrong Prescription for New York"

Americans for Tax Reform attacks Rep. Bill Owens (D-NY) for supporting the Affordable Care Act, relying on a series of distortions about the law's impact. In reality, the ACA does not raise taxes on most Americans, and it actually reduces the burden on many middle-class families. Moreover, the law reduces future Medicare spending without cutting seniors' benefits, and the Senate-confirmed board responsible for finding additional savings is forbidden from cutting benefits or rationing care.

Affordable Care Act Does Not Raise Taxes On Most Americans – And Includes Tax Credits For Millions

Affordable Care Act "Will Provide More Tax Relief Than Tax Burden" For Middle Class. According to the Washington Post fact checker Glenn Kessler: "The health law, if it works as the nonpartisan government analysts expect, will provide more tax relief than tax burden for middle-income Americans." [WashingtonPost.com, 7/6/12]

FactCheck.org: "A Large Majority Of Americans Would Not See Any Direct Tax Increase From The Health Care Law." According to FactCheck.org: "It's certainly true that the health care law would raise taxes on some Americans, particularly those with higher incomes. The law includes a Medicare payroll tax of 0.9 percent on income over $200,000 for individuals or $250,000 for couples, and a 3.8 percent tax on investment income for those earning that much. The Joint Committee on Taxation estimated that the biggest chunk of revenue — $210.2 billion — comes from those taxes. There are other taxes in the health care law — including an excise tax on the manufacturers of certain medical devices and on indoor tanning services. The health care law included $437.8 billion in tax revenue over 10 years, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation's calculations. Republicans tend to add in fees on individuals who don't obtain health insurance (which the Supreme Court now agrees can be considered taxes) and businesses that don't provide it to bump that up to about $500 billion. Some taxes, such as those on medical devices, may or may not be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices, but a large majority of Americans would not see any direct tax increase from the health care law." [FactCheck.org, 6/28/12]

- Individual Penalty Payments "Tiny" Compared To President Obama's Previous Tax Cuts.

According to FactCheck.org, the increased revenue from penalty payments by individuals who do not obtain health insurance represents "a tiny future increase compared with the tax cuts Obama has already delivered, including an estimated $120 billion in 2012 alone from the 2 percentage point cut in payroll taxes." [FactCheck.org, 5/17/12]

Affordable Care Act Includes Tax Credits For Millions Of Americans. According to Families USA: "We found that an estimated 28.6 million Americans will be eligible for the tax credits in 2014, and that the total value of the tax credits that year will be $110.1 billion. The new tax credits will provide much-needed assistance to insured individuals and families who struggle harder each year to pay rising premiums, as well as to uninsured individuals and families who need help purchasing coverage that otherwise would be completely out of reach financially. Most of the families who will be eligible for the tax credits will be employed, many for small businesses, and will have incomes between two and four times poverty (between $44,100 and $88,200 for a family of four based on 2010 poverty guidelines)." [FamiliesUSA.org, September 2010]

Affordable Care Act Savings Do Not 'Cut' Medicare Benefits

PolitiFact: Affordable Care Act Does Not Cut Medicare's Budget, It Attempts To Reduce Future Costs. According to PolitiFact, "Neither Obama nor his health care law literally cut a dollar amount from the Medicare program's budget. Rather, the health care law instituted a number of changes to try to bring down future health care costs in the program." [PolitiFact, 8/15/12]

Medicare Spending Reductions "Aimed At Insurance Companies And Hospitals, Not Beneficiaries." According to PolitiFact: "What kind of spending reductions are we talking about? They were mainly aimed at insurance companies and hospitals, not beneficiaries. The law makes significant reductions to Medicare Advantage, a subset of Medicare plans run by private insurers. Medicare Advantage was started under President George W. Bush, and the idea was that competition among the private insurers would reduce costs. But in recent years the plans have actually cost more than traditional Medicare. So the health care law scales back the payments to private insurers. Hospitals, too, will be paid less if they have too many re-admissions, or if they fail to meet other new benchmarks for patient care. Obama and fellow Democrats say the intention is to protect beneficiaries' coverage while forcing health care providers to become more efficient." [PolitiFact, 8/15/12]

• CBO's July Estimate Updates Medicare Cost Savings To $716 Billion. According to the Congressional Budget Office's analysis of a bill to repeal the Affordable Care Act, repeal would have the following effects on Medicare spending: "Spending for Medicare would increase by an estimated $716 billion over that 2013–2022 period. Federal spending for Medicaid and CHIP would increase by about $25 billion from repealing the noncoverage provisions of the ACA, and direct spending for other programs would decrease by about $30 billion, CBO estimates. Within Medicare, net increases in spending for the services covered by Part A (Hospital Insurance) and Part B (Medical Insurance) would total $517 billion and $247 billion, respectively. Those increases would be partially offset by a $48 billion reduction in net spending for Part D." [CBO.gov, 8/13/12]

GOP Plan Kept Most Of The Savings In The Affordable Care Act. According to the Washington Post's Glenn Kessler: "First of all, under the health care bill, Medicare spending continues to go up year after year. The health care bill tries to identify ways to save money, and so the $500 billion figure comes from the difference over 10 years between anticipated Medicare spending (what is known as 'the baseline') and the changes the law makes to reduce spending. [...] The savings actually are wrung from health-care providers, not Medicare beneficiaries. These spending reductions presumably would be a good thing, since virtually everyone agrees that Medicare spending is out of control. In the House Republican budget, lawmakers repealed the Obama health care law but retained all but $10 billion of the nearly $500 billion in Medicare savings, suggesting the actual policies enacted to achieve these spending reductions were not that objectionable to GOP lawmakers." [WashingtonPost.com, 6/15/11, emphasis added]

Medicare Board Tasked With Finding Additional Savings Is Forbidden From Cutting Benefits

ACA Establishes An Independent, Senate-Confirmed Board (IPAB) To Find Additional Savings. As explained by the Kaiser Family Foundation: "The 2010 health reform law (the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, also referred to as the ACA) establishes a new Independent Payment Advisory Board (IPAB) with authority to issue recommendations to reduce the growth in Medicare spending, and provides for the Board's recommendations to be considered by Congress and implemented by the Administration on a fast-track basis. [...]As authorized by the health reform law, IPAB is an independent board housed in the executive branch and composed of 15 full-time members appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. [Kaiser Family Foundation, April 2011]

IPAB Proposals Will Be Implemented Unless Congress Finds Alternative Savings Or Supermajority Overturns Them. According to the Washington Post: "Beginning with fiscal 2015, if Medicare is projected to grow too quickly, the IPAB will make binding recommendations to reduce spending. Those recommendations will be sent to Capitol Hill at the beginning of each year, and if Congress doesn't like them, it must pass alternative cuts — of the same size — by August. A supermajority of the Senate can also vote to amend the IPAB [spending] recommendations. If Congress fails to act, the secretary of Health and Human Services is required to implement the cuts by default." [Washington Post, 5/8/11]

IPAB Cannot Recommend "Changes In Premiums, Benefits, Eligibility And Taxes." According to the Kaiser Family Foundation: "The Board is prohibited from recommending changes that would reduce payments to certain providers before 2020, and is also prohibited from recommending changes in premiums, benefits, eligibility and taxes, or other changes that would result in rationing." [Kaiser Family Foundation, April 2011]

PolitiFact: "The Law Specifically States That The Board Cannot Ration Care." According to PolitiFact, "Actually, the law specifically states that the board cannot ration care. The board doesn't look at individual patients or deny individual treatments. Instead, it makes system-wide recommendations to rein in the future growth of Medicare spending, and it makes those recommendations within limited parameters. It also was created to stop runaway spending growth within the Medicare program itself, not to divert money to other budget items." [PolitiFact.com, 3/12/12]

Americans For Tax Reform: "Skyrocket"

In an ad tying Rep. Ben Chandler (D-KY) to President Obama's pre-election statements on cap-and-trade, Americans for Tax Reform accuses Chandler of voting for a plan that would kill Kentucky jobs. But the job-loss estimate comes from an industry-funded study of the American Clean Energy and Security Act, which other analysts projected would create jobs and boost GDP while costing consumers little.

American Clean Energy And Security Act Would Have Boosted The Economy At Minimal Cost To Consumers

The claim that cap-and-trade would kill 35,000 Kentucky jobs comes from a study of the Waxman-Markey bill, also called the American Clean Energy and Security Act, by the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Council for Capital Formation.

Reuters: Experts Say House-Passed Clean Energy Bill Would Have "Only A Modest Impact On Consumers." According to Reuters: "A new U.S. government study on Tuesday adds to a growing list of experts concluding that climate legislation moving through Congress would have only a modest impact on consumers, adding around $100 to household costs in 2020. Under the climate legislation passed by the House of Representatives in June, electricity, heating oil and other bills for average families will rise $134 in 2020 and $339 in 2030, according to the Energy Information Administration, the country's top energy forecaster. The EIA estimate was in line with earlier projections from the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office which said average families would pay about $175 extra annually by 2020, and the Environmental Protection Agency, which said families would pay at most an extra $1 per day." [Reuters, 8/5/09]

- CBO: Energy Costs Would Actually Decrease For Low-Income Households. According to the Congressional Budget Office's analysis of the American Clean Energy and Security Act, if the bill were implemented, "households in the lowest income quintile would see an average net benefit of about $40 in 2020, while households in the highest income quintile would see a net cost of $245." [CBO.gov,6/19/09]
- Study: Clean Energy Legislation Would Create Jobs, Boost GDP. According to an analysis by the University of California, Berkley: "Comprehensive clean energy and climate protection legislation, like the American Clean Energy and Security Act (ACES) that was passed by the House of Representatives in June, would strengthen the U.S. economy by establishing pollution limits and incentives that together will drive large-scale investments in clean energy and energy efficiency. These investments will result in stronger job growth, higher real household income, and increased economic output than the U.S. would experience without the bill. New analysis by the University of California shows conclusively that climate policy will strengthen the U.S. economy as a whole. Full adoption of the ACES package of pollution reduction and energy efficiency measures would create between 918,000 and 1.9 million new jobs, increase annual household income by $487-$1,175 per year, and boost GDP by $39 billion-$111 billion. These economic gains are over and above the growth the U.S. would see in the absence of such a bill." [University of California, Berkeley, accessed 5/14/12]

Americans For Tax Reform: "Safe"

Blaming Rep. John Barrow for unemployment figures caused by the recession, Americans for Tax Reform ties the Georgia Democrat to President Obama, who inherited a tanking economy but has lately presided over 31 months of steady private-sector growth. ATR also attacks Barrow over his votes to raise the debt ceiling, which prevented the economic catastrophe associated with default on our debts but didn't authorize any new spending.

Recession-Fueled Massive Monthly Job Losses Have Turned To Steady Private-Sector Growth

Recession Officially Ran From December 2007 To June 2009, Making It The Longest Since World War II. From the National Bureau of Economic Research: "The Business Cycle Dating Committee of the National Bureau of Economic Research met yesterday by conference call. At its meeting, the committee determined that a trough in business activity occurred in the U.S. economy in June 2009. The trough marks the end of the recession that began in December 2007 and the beginning of an expansion. The recession lasted 18 months, which makes it the longest of any recession since World War II. Previously the longest postwar recessions were those of 1973-75 and 1981-82, both of which lasted 16 months. In determining that a trough occurred in June 2009, the committee did not conclude that economic conditions since that month have been favorable or that the economy has returned to operating at normal capacity. Rather, the committee determined only that the recession ended and a recovery began in that month." [NBER.org, 9/20/10]

- Recession Resulted In 8.3 Million Job Losses. According to the Associated Press, "the Great Recession killed 8.3 million jobs, compared with 1.6 million lost in the 2001 recession." [Associated Press via Yahoo! News, 5/4/12]

Bush Recession Was So Severe That Economy Was Still Shedding Over Three-Quarters Of A Million Jobs Per Month Through First Few Months Of President Obama's Term. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the economy shed 839,000 jobs in January 2009, 725,000 in February 2009, 787,000 in March 2009, and 802,000 in April 2009, for a four-month average of 788,250 lost jobs per month. [BLS.gov, accessed 5/3/12]

Since The Recession Ended In June 2009, The Private Sector Has Added 3.5 Million Jobs While Public-Sector Employment Has Fallen By 569,000. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were 107,933,000 private-sector jobs in June 2009, and 111,499,000 private-sector jobs in September 2012, an increase of 3,566,000 jobs. The BLS also reports that there were 22,570,000 Americans working in the public sector in June 2009, and 22,001,000 working in the public sector in September 2012, a decrease of 569,000 jobs. The private-sector gains and public-sector losses add up to a total increase of 2,797,000 jobs. The following chart shows the cumulative private-sector job gains and public-sector job losses since the recession officially ended in June 2009:

[BLS.gov, accessed 10/5/12; BLS.gov, accessed 10/5/12; NBER.org, 9/20/10]

• Conservative AEI: The Public Sector Has Shrunk, But Private-Sector Growth Is Above Average. From American Enterprise Institute scholar Mark J. Perry: "In the second quarter of 2012, 'public sector GDP' decreased -1.44%, and that was the eighth straight quarter of negative growth for total government spending, averaging -2.88% per quarter over the last two years. In contrast, there have been 12 consecutive quarters of positive growth for private sector GDP averaging 3.07% per quarter in the three years since the recession ended, which is slightly higher than the 2.8% average growth rate in private real GDP over the last 25 years." [AEI-Ideas.org, 7/31/12]

The Private Sector Has Added 4.7 Million Jobs Over 31 Consecutive Months Of Private-Sector Growth. The following chart shows the monthly change in private-sector jobs dating back to January 2008:

[BLS.gov, accessed 10/5/12; MSNBC.com, 10/5/12]

Georgia's Unemployment Rate Has Fallen From Recession-Driven High Of 10.5 Percent To 9 Percent. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Georgia's unemployment rate peaked at 10.5 percent in October 2009 (four months after the last official month of the recession), remaining above 10 percent for more than a year. As of September 2012,

Georgia's unemployment rate was an estimated 9.0 percent. [BLS.gov, accessed 10/31/12; NBER.org, 9/20/10]

Georgia Has Gained Over 80,000 Jobs Since Recession Ended In June 2009. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were 3,857,900 people employed in Georgia in June 2009, the last official month of the recession. As of September 2012, the last month for which data are available, there were an estimated 3,942,100 people employed in the state, a gain of 84,200 jobs. [BLS.gov, accessed 10/31/12; NBER.org, 9/20/10]

Failure To Raise The Debt Ceiling Could Have Had Severe Economic Consequences

Debt Ceiling Does Not Determine U.S.' Debt Level; It Is "A Limit On The Ability Of The Federal Government To Pay Obligations Already Incurred." According to the Government Accountability Office: "The debt limit does not control or limit the ability of the federal government to run deficits or incur obligations. Rather, it is a limit on the ability to pay obligations already incurred. While debates surrounding the debt limit may raise awareness about the federal government's current debt trajectory and may also provide Congress with an opportunity to debate the fiscal policy decisions driving that trajectory, the ability to have an immediate effect on debt levels is limited" [GAO.gov, 2/22/11]

Failure To Raise Debt Ceiling Could Have Resulted In Default Or Had Other Severe Economic Consequences. From CNNMoney: "A failure to raise the debt ceiling would likely send shockwaves through the underpinnings of the financial system -- and possibly ripple out to individual investors and consumers. The federal government would be forced to prioritize its payments. It would risk defaulting on its financial obligations. And if that happens, credit rating agencies would downgrade U.S. debt." [Money.CNN.com, 7/21/11]

Debt Limit Has Been Raised Over 90 Times Since 1940. From the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "Before World War I, Congress generally had to approve each separate issuance of federal debt. Since then, the limit has evolved into an overall dollar cap on the amount of debt the federal government can incur. Since 1940, Congress has enacted 91 separate increases in the statutory debt limit, an average of one every nine months (though individual increases lasted anywhere from three days to eight years)." Americans for Tax Reform: "Tax Raising Politician (OH-06)"

Americans for Tax Reform targets former Ohio congressman Charlie Wilson's (D) support for ending the Bush tax cuts for the wealthy, which the group claims will hurt small businesses and kill jobs. However, conservatives rely on a dubious definition of "small business," and allowing the top tax bracket to return to its pre-Bush level would not affect many actual employers. In addition, ATR's charge that phasing out the tax breaks would cause job losses is based on a flawed study that assumes the revenue will not go toward deficit reduction, which is exactly what Wilson and other Democrats have proposed.

Wilson Voted To End The Bush Tax Cuts For The Wealthiest Americans

The ad cites House Vote #604 on H.R. 4853 on December 2, 2010, to support the claim that Wilson "supports raising taxes on small businesses."

Wilson Voted To Extend Bush Tax Cuts For Middle Class But Let Them Expire For Top Earners. From the Associated Press: "The U.S. House of Representatives Thursday voted to extend Bush-era tax cuts on individual income up to $200,000 a year and $250,000 for families, letting extra cuts for the wealthiest to expire." Rep. Wilson voted "yea" on the bill. [Associated Press via MSNBC.com, 12/2/10; H.R. 4853, Vote #604, 12/2/10]

Those In The Top Bracket Still Benefit From Middle-Income Tax Cuts. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> Furthermore, as Figure 2 shows, under the proposal to allow tax cuts on income above $250,000 ($200,000 for single filers) to expire, taxpayers in the top two brackets would still keep sizeable tax cuts on the first $250,000 of their income ($200,000 for single filers).

[Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 7/19/12]

Few Top Income Taxpayers Are Actual "Small Businesses"

CBPP: "Only 2.5 Percent Of Small Business Owners Face The Top Two Rates." According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "Allowing the top two marginal tax rates to return to pre-2001 levels as scheduled next year would affect very few small businesses, a recent Treasury Department study found. The study shows that only 2.5 percent of small business owners face the top two rates." [Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 7/19/12, internal citations removed]

• Conservatives Rely On Definition Of "Small Business" That Counts President Obama And Mitt Romney. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: "The claims that allowing the Bush tax cuts for high-income people to expire would seriously harm small businesses rest on an exceedingly broad, and misleading, definition of 'small business.' The definition is so broad, in fact, that under it, both President Obama and Governor Romney would count as small business owners — as would 237 of the nation's 400 wealthiest people." [Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 7/19/12, internal citations removed]

• Conservative Definition Of "Small Businesses" Includes Multi-Billion-Dollar Corporations Like Bechtel And PricewaterhouseCoopers. According to the Center for American Progress: "'That's 750,000 small businesses in America, the most productive, the ones that are the most successful, getting hit by a tax increase on top of everything else that's happened to them in the last 18 months of this administration,' said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY). But McConnell's number is only accurate if you take an incredibly expansive view of what constitutes a small business.Included in that 750,000 is the Bechtel Corporation, the largest engineering firm in the country. It is the fifth-largest privately owned company in the United States, posting gross revenue in 2008 of $31.4 billion. [...] The auditing firm PricewaterhouseCoopers, which has operations in more than 150 countries, fits the bill as well." [Center for American Progress, 10/21/10, emphasis added]

• Former Bush Economist Alan Viard: GOP's Definition Of Small Businesses Is A "Fallacy."As reported by the Washington Post: "Which is why Republicans continually define pass-through entities of all sizes as small businesses, a position [former Bush White House economist Alan] Viard called a 'fallacy.' 'How can it be that 3 percent of owners are accounting for 50 percent of small business income? Those firms they're owning can't be all that small,' Viard said. 'And that's true. They're very large.'" [Washington Post, 9/17/10]

Joint Committee On Taxation: "3.5 Percent Of All Taxpayers With Net Positive Business Income" Fall Into Top Tax Bracket. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation: The staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that in 2013 approximately 940,000 taxpayers with net positive business income (3.5 percent of all taxpayers with net positive business income) will have marginal rates of 36 or 39.6 percent under the president's proposal, and that 53 percent of the approximately $1.3 trillion of aggregate net positive business income will be reported on returns that have a marginal rate of 36 or 39.6 percent. [Joint Committee On Taxation, 6/18/12]

Ending Upper-Income Tax Cuts Will Reduce Deficits Without Harming The Economy

CRS: Allowing Tax Cuts For The Rich To Expire Will Reduce Deficits "Without Stifling The Economic Recovery." According to Reuters: "Letting tax rates for the wealthy rise will not put a short-term damper on the economic recovery, according to a report by the non-partisan research arm of the U.S. Congress. [...] Republicans want the cuts continued for all income groups while Democrats favor letting them expire for the most affluent Americans. 'If the economy is still weak, a temporary extension (of all the rates) will not harm the economy,' despite adding to the deficit, the CRS report said, citing CRS economist Thomas Hungerford. But allowing the rates to rise just for the wealthy could help 'reduce budget deficits in the short term without stifling the economic recovery.'" [Reuters, 7/19/12]

CBPP: Bush Tax Cuts Are Driving The Debt. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

> The complementary chart, below, shows that the Bush-era tax cuts and the Iraq and Afghanistan wars — including their associated interest costs — account for almost half of the projected public debt in 2019 (measured as a share of the economy) if we continue current policies.

[Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 5/20/11]

"Killing Jobs" Claim Relies On Flawed Study That Assumes Revenue Will Not Be Used To Reduce Deficits

The ad cites a Washington Post report from July 17, 2012, about an Ernst & Young study commissioned by business groups, including the conservative NFIB and U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Ernst & Young Study Didn't Address President's Proposals. According to economist Jared Bernstein: "First off, E&Y quite conspicuously fail to simulate what it is the President is proposing, so their main findings shouldn't be considered in evaluating his proposals. Second, when they get a little closer to what he is proposing, they find it adds jobs." [JaredBernsteinBlog.com, 8/14/12]

Ernst & Young Study Assumes Revenue From Ending Tax Cuts Will Pay For More Spending But Obama Proposed To Use It For Deficit Reduction. From an analysis by the National Economic Council's Jason Furman via the White House: "The President has proposed to let the high-income tax cuts expire and use the resulting $1 trillion in savings (over 10 years) as part of a balanced plan to reduce deficits and debt and put the nation on a sustainable fiscal course that includes $2.50 of spending cuts for every $1.00 of revenue. But rather than modeling the

President's proposal to reduce the deficit, the headline numbers in the study explicitly assume that the revenue would be used entirely to finance additional spending. In fact, the study explicitly states, 'Using the additional revenue to reduce the deficit is not modeled.'" [WhiteHouse.gov, 7/17/12, underlining original]

When The Study Models Ending Top-Tier Tax Cuts While Giving Middle Class Cuts, It Projects An Employment Increase. According to economist Jared Bernstein: "But for all of that, they actually find that when they model something that's closer to what the President is proposing — getting rid of the Bush tax cuts for high-income families, while providing additional tax cuts to the middle-class — employment grows by 0.4%, or almost 600,000 jobs. When they simulate the wrong scenario of new tax revenues used to support higher spending (column 1, table 2), they estimate that employment would fall by 0.5%. But if the revenue was used to finance across-the-board tax cuts, employment grows." [JaredBernsteinBlog.com, 8/14/12]

About

"We're part of the right-wing movement," Michael Grebe, president and CEO of the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation, told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel in 2011. With over $500 million in assets as of 2010 and annual giving in the tens of millions, the influential Bradley Foundation directs much of its substantial funds toward organizations, publications, and projects that constitute, in Grebe's words, "the conservative intellectual infrastructure in this country." It has provided the financial support for public policy initiatives that include welfare reform in the 1990s, school voucher programs that would privatize public education, and, more recently, the crackdown on public-sector unions' collective bargaining rights in the foundation's home state of Wisconsin.

To further its mission of "strengthening American democratic capitalism and the institutions, principles, and values that sustain and nurture it," the Bradley Foundation has doled out money to virtually every major player in the conservative intellectual cavalry, including millions of dollars to think tanks like the Heritage Foundation, the American Enterprise Institute, and the Cato Institute. In 2010 alone, the Bradley Foundation gave away over $42 million, and from 2001-2009 decade it handed out almost as much as all seven Koch and Scaife foundations combined. It contributes to the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC), a group that drafts conservative and pro-business state-level legislation including voter ID laws and the controversial "Stand Your Ground" laws. In 2010, it gave $150,000 to Grover Norquist's influential anti-tax group, Americans for Tax Reform. Vocal anti-gay hate group the Family Research Council received $60,000. The global warming-deniers at the Heartland Institute got money to support "public education"; in Heartland's case, that means a strategic and coordinated effort to undermine the credibility of climate science.

The Bradley Foundation calls itself the "philanthropic legacy" of the Bradley brothers, who were entrepreneurs and union-busters with an interest in limited government and free-market economics. Lynde Bradley moved to set up the foundation in 1941, but died before its establishment, which was finalized by his relatives. Although the foundation initially supported a variety of charitable and political causes, it didn't attain its current size until two decades after Harry Bradley's 1965 death, when the brothers' company, Allen-Bradley, was bought by Rockwell International and the foundation's assets multiplied twenty times over.

At that point, with the election of Reagan transition team member Michael Joyce as its president, the Bradley Foundation upped its political involvement, increasing the proportion of its grants related to public policy from just 2.5 percent in 1980 to over 60 percent by 1990. With Joyce at the helm, the Bradley Foundation parceled out millions of dollars that helped build the modern conservative infrastructure and funded the development of conservative public policy initiatives. Joyce was "a central figure in Wisconsin's welfare reform movement," for example, and under his guidance, the Bradley Foundation championed an expansion of Milwaukee's school voucher program.

In 2001, Joyce stepped down and Michael Grebe took over as President and CEO, deepening the foundation's ties to the Republican Party. Grebe's resume includes an 18-year stint as the Republican National Committeeman for Wisconsin, time as a general counsel to the Republican National Committee, and a spot as a delegate to five Republican National Conventions. In 2010, Grebe served as chairman for Republican Scott Walker's Wisconsin gubernatorial campaign and later headed Walker's transition team.

Under Grebe's leadership, the Bradley Foundation has sought to expand the reach of its ideas, handing out $250,000 Bradley Prizes to figures such as Jeb Bush, the Washington Examiner's Michael Barone, and the Washington Post's George Will. It has also begun funding a new handful of media organizations sympathetic to Republicans during the Wisconsin recall elections. This dovetails with Grebe's personal political activities; after working unsuccessfully to prevent Gov. Scott Walker from having to face a recall election, he chaired Walker's recall election campaign.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

60 Plus Association

About

Proudly proclaiming that it is "often viewed as the conservative alternative to the American Association of Retired Persons," 60 Plus Association's priorities appear to be less oriented toward advocacy on behalf of older generations than toward convincing retirees that Democrats are out to steal their Medicare. Ostensibly non-partisan but transparently echoing Republican messaging with little regard for its alignment with reality, 60 Plus works to enact a handful of conservative reforms by lobbying Congress and running ads supporting conservative candidates for office.

Founded in 1992, 60 Plus is well connected to the GOP. Chairman James L. Martin was chief of staff for a GOP senator and helped organize several conservative advocacy groups. President Amy Noone Frederick is a seasoned lobbyist who ran for the Virginia House of Delegates as a Republican, although she withdrew before the election. Spokesman Pat Boone – the 50s singer – is an unabashed Tea Party-style conservative who endorsed Rick Santorum for president and who remained a birther even after President Obama released his long-form birth certificate. The organization has been accused of being a front group for the pharmaceutical industry, but Martin denies that 60 Plus has received any insurance industry donations "for years." According to the Center for Responsive Politics, 60 Plus did get $25,000 from the American Petroleum Institute in 2010, plus $50,000 from Crossroads GPS. It also got nearly $9 million from the shadowy Center to Protect Patient Rights, an anonymously funded donor group with ties to the Koch brothers. However, its 501(c)(4) nonprofit status allows 60 Plus to keep the majority of its funders anonymous. The group claims to have over 7.1 million members and "over 500,000 citizen lobbyists," and Martin implies that its funding is mainly derived from individual donations.

In 2010, the organization spent about $886,500 of its $16 million in revenues on "providing resources and educational materials to senior citizens" in a general sense, but used $13.4 million specifically to "provide educational awareness about the effects of healthcare reform for seniors." You can bet that little of that was spent to inform seniors that the Affordable Care Act closes the donut hole or ensures that Medicare provides free preventive services. To make 60 Plus' partisanship even more obvious, 100 percent of the organization's $7 million-plus of independent campaign expenditures benefited Republican candidates. Between August 1 and Election Day, 60 Plus ran at least 6,216 ads – all anonymously funded.

After the 2010 elections, 60 Plus turned its attention to promoting House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan's (R-WI) budget plan, which proposed to dismantle the current Medicare system in favor of a voucher program that would slowly shift health care costs onto seniors. 60 Plus ran ads telling seniors the GOP plan would "save Medicare" without informing them about the radical changes its cost-saving mechanisms necessitated.

Heading toward the 2012 elections, 60 Plus is still capitalizing on misinformation about health care reform in the ads it's running against Democratic candidates. Health care isn't its only area of interest, however. 60 Plus has long been focused on repealing the estate tax, which it calls the "death tax," and on privatizing Social Security.
