Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX)

Cornyn is the Ranking Member of the Judiciary subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and Border Security.

In 2007, Cornyn Voted Against The DREAM Act, And In 2010 He Warned It Would Lead To "Chain Migration." According to The Houston Chronicle's Texas on the Potomac blog, "Texas Sen. John Cornyn criticized the DREAM Act Tuesday at the measure's first-ever Senate hearing, calling it a move that could spur illegal immigration and fraud in the absence of comprehensive immigration reform. [...] [H]e added that the legislation offers too few protections against fraud and could lead to 'chain migration'' if it is not paired with comprehensive immigration reform. 'Were we to pass this bill as a stand-alone bill without addressing the rest of our broken immigration system, I believe it is far less likely that we would ever get to the other issues in our broken system,' he said." In 2007 Cornyn voted against cloture on a version of the DREAM Act. Cornyn Called Democratic Support For DREAM Act "A Cynical Effort To Use The Hopes And Dreams Of These Young People As A Political Wedge." According to The Houston Chronicle's Texas on the Potomac blog, "Cornyn called the act's attempted passage in 2010 'political football in a political stunt.' 'It had all of the hallmarks of a cynical effort to use the hopes and dreams of these young people as a political wedge in the run-up to the 2012 election,' he said." Sen. Cornyn Linked Illegal Immigration To Swine Flu Outbreaks. During an April 2009 Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on comprehensive immigration reform, Sen. Cornyn stated, "Obviously, there is a public health component of our immigration system, and so we need to restore one that is protective of the public health as the recent incidents of this last week or so have reminded us." According to The Huffington Post, "Conservative media hosts, including Michelle Malkin and Glenn Beck, have placed the blame for the spread of swine flu to the United States squarely on the shoulders of undocumented Mexican immigrants. Some even suggested yesterday that Mexicans were purposefully carrying the virus across the border to sabotage the United States. There's no basis for either claim -- in fact, news reports and health officials suggest that Americans traveling to Mexico likely carried the disease home." Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY)

McConnell Defended Arizona Immigration Law, Said Obama Should Take "Amnesty Off The Table." According to a statement by Sen. Mitch McConnell responding to the Justice Department's challenge to Arizona's immigration law, "Suing the people of Arizona for attempting to do a job the federal government has utterly failed to execute will not help secure our borders. If the President wants to make real progress on this issue, he can do so by taking amnesty off the table and focus his efforts on border and interior security. It is long past time for this administration to prioritize solving a crisis over imposing an agenda and the first step is to recognize that attorneys and amnesty are not acceptable alternatives to border security and job creation." [McConnell Statement via ABC News, 7/6/10]

McConnell: Congress "Ought To Take A Look At" Birthright Citizenship Granted By The 14th Amendment. According to The Hill, "Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) told The Hill on Monday that Congress 'ought to take a look at' changing the 14th Amendment, which gives the children of illegal immigrants a right to U.S. citizenship. McConnell's statement signals growing support within the GOP for the controversial idea, which has also recently been touted by Senate Minority Whip Jon Kyl (R-Ariz.) and Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.). In an interview, McConnell said the 14th Amendment provision should be reconsidered in light of the country's immigration problem. McConnell stopped short of echoing Graham's call for revamping the amendment. 'I think we ought to take a look at it — hold hearings, listen to the experts on it,' McConnell said. 'I haven't made a final decision about it, but that's something that we clearly need to look at. Regardless of how you feel about the various aspects of immigration reform, I don't think anybody thinks that's something they're comfortable with.'" [The Hill, 8/2/10]

• McConnell Subsequently Claimed "I'm Not Aware Of Anybody Who Has Come Out For Altering The 14th Amendment." According to the New York Times, "At a breakfast on Thursday in Washington, Senator Mitch McConnell, the Senate minority leader, tried to tamp down a controversy that started when Senator Lindsey Graham, Republican of South Carolina, questioned the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, which grants the right to citizenship to anyone born in the United States. 'I am not aware of anybody who has come out in favor of altering the 14th Amendment,' Mr. McConnell said. But Mr. Graham, speaking on Fox News last week, said it was 'a mistake' to allow American-born children of illegal immigrants to become citizens automatically, a practice known as birthright citizenship. He said that along with a plan to grant legal status to millions of illegal immigrants, he would also amend the 14th Amendment as a way of discouraging future unauthorized immigration." [New York Times, 8/6/10]

McConnell Opposed DREAM Act Because "We Should Not Reward Illegal Behavior." According to floor remarks by Sen. Mitch McConnell, "I am disappointed my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are not continuing on the bipartisan path of enhancing our security. Instead, they are bringing up a controversial issue with the DREAM Act. This bill is an attempt to put illegal immigrants who graduate from a U.S. high school or obtain their GED on a special path to citizenship. Though I recognize and appreciate the tremendous contributions to our country made by generations of legal immigrants, I do not believe we

Cruz Attacked Primary Opponent's Support For Guest Worker Program. According to Fox News Latino, "Cruz went on the offensive against Dewhurst on illegal immigration—a key issue in the state that shares the longest stretch of U.S.-Mexico border—calling attention to Dewhurst's 2007 support of a guest worker program for the state's undocumented immigrants, announced at a speech in South Texas. Cruz called the guest worker idea more expansive than President Obama's decision to call off deportations for immigrants without criminal records who came here illegally as children—a policy that Cruz opposes and called 'illegal.'" Cruz Supported Border Wall, Including Possibility Of Confiscating Private Property. According to Fox News Latino, "Cruz also distinguished himself from Dewhurst with his full-throated support for a border wall estimated by the Department of Homeland Security to cost $7.3 billion, or $6.5 million per mile. Cruz defended the border wall proposal even if it meant expropriating private property—a position that the debate's moderators, WFAA reporter Brad Watson and Gromer Jeffers of the Dallas Morning News, said contrasted with Cruz's message of fiscal conservatism. 'One of the specific powers and responsibilities of the federal government is to secure the borders,' Cruz said. 'Property can be taken with due process of law and just compensation.'" Cruz Criticized Idea Of Providing Green Cards To Unauthorized Immigrants. According to the Washington Examiner, "Sen. Ted Cruz signaled yesterday on FOX News that he was concerned about allowing illegal immigrants to get a green card – reportedly part of the Gang of Eight Senate bill for immigration reform. Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., supports the idea of allowing illegal immigrants to apply for a green card after a 10-year wait. 'The problem with the green card is the green card is a permanent legal residence status, and anyone who has a green card is eligible for citizenship within five years,' Cruz explained to FOX News host Sean Hannity. 'And so, if someone can get a green card, that is a path to citizenship.'" [Washington Examiner, 4/2/13]

Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX)

Cruz sits on the Judiciary subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and Border Security.

Cruz Claimed Obama Wants Immigration Reform Bill To "Crater" So Democrats Can Use It As "A Political Wedge." According to Ted Cruz in an interview with the Dallas Morning News, "[Obama's] behavior concerning immigration leads me to believe that what he wants is a political issue rather than actually to pass a bill. What he wants is for the bill to crater, so that he can use the issue as a political wedge in 2014 and 2016. That is why I believe the president is insisting on a path to citizenship for those who are here illegally. Because by insisting on that, he ensures that any immigration reform bill will be voted down in the House." [Dallas Morning News, 3/24/13]

Cruz: "I Do Not Support The Dream Act And Categorically Oppose Amnesty." Asked by Telemundo whether Romney should reinstate deportations of young people granted deferred action, Cruz said, 'I do.' 'I think it is without authority, and we're a nation of rule of law, and it is not defending anyone's freedom to be undermining rule of law,' he said of President Obama's June announcement that his administration would grant work authorizations and deferred action -- reprieve from deportation concerns for two years -- to some undocumented young people." Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ)

Flake is a member of the "gang of eight."

Flake Abandoned Long-Held Position On Immigration Reform In Conjunction With Run For Senate. According to The Arizona Republic, "For years, Rep. Jeff Flake was one of the most reliable Republican champions for comprehensive immigration reform. Not anymore. As his campaign for Arizona's 2012 GOP Senate nomination revs up, Flake is explicitly rejecting his past advocacy for far-reaching legislation that would secure the border, enact a temporary-worker program and give many undocumented immigrants a pathway to legal status. 'In the past I have supported a broad approach to immigration reform -- increased border security coupled with a temporary worker program. I no longer do,' Flake says in an immigration-policy statement that was expected to be posted on his campaign website as early as today. 'I've been down that road, and it is a dead end. The political realities in Washington are such that a comprehensive solution is not possible, or even desirable given the current leadership. Border security must be addressed before other reforms are tackled.'" [The Arizona Republic, 3/23/11]

• WSJ Op-Ed: Flake Once Said That "Virtually All" Undocumented Immigrants Have Ties To Smuggling And Drugs. According to the Wall Street Journal, "Mr. Flake has represented suburban Phoenix since 2001 and distinguished himself as, among other things, a champion of comprehensive immigration reform that includes not only more border security but also viable guest worker programs to meet U.S. labor market demand and a pathway to citizenship for undocumented workers already here. These days, he sounds more like Arizona's Sheriff Joe Arpaio, denouncing comprehensive immigration reform as 'a dead end' and saying it's no longer 'possible or even desirable.' He touts his support for walling off the Mexican border and suggests (incorrectly) that illegal Latinos drive violent crime in the U.S., telling one interviewer that 'virtually all' of the people entering the country illegally today are tied to smuggling rings and drug cartels. Mr. Flake, who is also known as a staunch fiscal hawk, apparently believes that kind of immigration rhetoric is necessary to win over Republican primary voters." [Wall Street Journal Op-Ed, 7/10/12]

Flake Urged SCOTUS to Uphold Arizona Immigration Law. According to a press release from Sen. Flake's office, "Republican Congressman Jeff Flake, who represents Arizona's Sixth District, today urged the Supreme Court to uphold SB 1070, Arizona's immigration enforcement law. Congressman Flake has consistently opposed the Obama Administration's decision to sue Arizona over the law. 'It should be expected that states like Arizona will take action to enforce immigration laws when the federal government continues its long history of failing to do so,' said Flake. 'The Obama Administration ought to focus on securing the border instead of suing Arizona for trying to help.'" [Flake Press Release, 4/25/12]

Flake Voted Against the DREAM Act. On December 8, 2010, Flake voted against the DREAM Act. According to the Immigration Policy Center, "The DREAM Act ...provides 'conditional' permanent residency to qualified unauthorized immigrants who enrolled in college or serve in the military. After meeting a set of requirements, including completion of at least two years of college or military service, the conditional status could be converted to full-fledged permanent resident status, which is a prerequisite for obtaining U.S. citizenship. The legislation currently before the Senate and the House would permit individuals up to age 35 to benefit from the DREAM Act, provided that they entered the United States before their 16th birthday and resided in the country for at least five years before the bill's enactment. The two-year college or military requirement could be met in a variety of ways, including attending community or vocational school or service in the National Guard. Upon completion of the two-year requirement, applicants could seek to remove the condition and become permanent residents." [H.R. 5281, Vote# 625, 12/8/10; ImmigrationPolicy.org, 6/5/12]

Graham is a member of the "gang of eight."

Graham In 2010: DREAM Act Vote "Is Nothing More Than A Political Game By The Democrats To Try And Drive A Wedge Between The Hispanic Community And Republicans." According to a statement from Sen. Graham on his opposition to the DREAM Act, "Illegal immigration is a nightmare for America. Giving a pathway to citizenship without first securing the border is an inducement to encourage more illegal immigration. This is nothing more than a political game by the Democrats to try and drive a wedge between the Hispanic community and Republicans. Today's cynical vote on the DREAM Act, along with a series of other votes, convinces me that the Democratic leadership in the Senate does not get the message from the last election. They care more about politics than policy in a variety of areas, including illegal immigration." [Graham Press Release, 12/9/10]

Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.) announced Wednesday night that he is considering introducing a constitutional amendment that would change existing law to no longer grant citizenship to the children of immigrants born in the United States. Currently, the 14th Amendment grants citizenship to any child born in the United States. But with 12 million illegal immigrants living in the U.S., Graham said it may be time to restrict the ability of immigrants to have children who become citizens just because they are born in the country. 'I may introduce a constitutional amendment that changes the rules if you have a child here,' Graham said during an interview with Fox News' Greta Van Susteren. 'Birthright citizenship I think is a mistake ... We should change our Constitution and say if you come here illegally and you have a child, that child's automatically not a citizen.' [...] 'People come here to have babies,' he said. 'They come here to drop a child. It's called 'drop and leave.' To have a child in America, they cross the border, they go to the emergency room, have a child, and that child's automatically an American citizen. That shouldn't be the case. That attracts people here for all the wrong reasons.'" [Politico, 7/29/10]

Graham Expressed Support For Universal Biometric ID Cards To Verify Work Eligibility So "You Wouldn't Have To Look At Somebody Based On Their Accent Or Their Background." On CNN's State of the Union, Sen. Lindsey Graham stated, "I'm willing, Candy, to have every American take their Social Security card and turn it into a biometric document; put your ID on there, a fingerprint, so when you go get a job or I go get a job, we can present a Social Security card to our employer and they can verify we are who we say we are. If we all agree to do that as a people, you wouldn't have to look at somebody based on their accent or their background. You would have a document that's trustworthy and verifiable. I can get you a fake Social Security by midnight." [CNN, State of the Union, 8/1/10]

commitment, we can then address all of the issues plaguing our broken immigration system. There simply isn't sufficient political support to do anything before we secure our borders and there won't be until we do." McCain cosponsored the DREAM Act in 2003, 2005, and 2007. After Touting "Amnesty," McCain Repeatedly Claimed He "Never Supported Amnesty." In June 2010, the New York Times reported, "Repeatedly over three days, Mr. McCain was asked why he had supported 'amnesty' for illegal immigrants in the past ('I never supported amnesty,' he says)." McCain also repeatedly claimed he "never supported amnesty" during presidential debates in 2008. However, McCain previously endorsed the idea of "amnesty" as part of immigration reform, saying, "Amnesty has to be an important part because there are people who have lived in this country for 20, 30 or 40 years, who have raised children here and pay taxes here and are not citizens. That has to be a component of it." [New York Times, 6/21/10; Associated Press, 1/6/08; GOP Primary Debate, 5/15/07; Politico Playbook, 6/4/07]

McCain Released Ad Saying "Complete The Danged Fence" On The U.S.-Mexico Border. According to ABC News, "Sen. John McCain has released a tough-talking television ad that blames illegal immigrants for 'home invasions [and] murders' and calls for the completion of the 'danged fence' along the U.S.-Mexico border, reversing years of criticizing such a barrier. [...] Walking along the incomplete fence with Pinal County Sheriff Paul Babeu, McCain says: 'drug and human smuggling, home invasions, murder.' To, which Babeu responds, 'We're outmanned. Of all the illegals in America, more than half come through Arizona.' Babeu tells McCain that his proposal for curbing illegal immigration is a perfect plan: 'You bring troops, state, county and local law enforcement together.' 'And,' adds McCain, 'complete the danged fence.' 'It'll work this time. Senator, You're one of us,' Babeu replies." [ABC News, 5/11/10]

Sen. John McCain (R-AZ)

McCain is a member of the "gang of eight."

McCain Suggested Arizona Wildfires Were Started By "People Who Have Crossed Our Border Illegally." According to CNN, "U.S. Sen. John McCain is blaming illegal immigrants for starting some of the wildfires that have scorched hundreds of thousands of acres in Arizona. 'There is substantial evidence that some of these fires have been caused by people who have crossed our border illegally,' McCain, R-Arizona, said Saturday at a press conference. 'The answer to that part of the problem is to get a secure border.' The Arizona senator, however, did not say what the evidence is, prompting a swift rebuke from Latino civil rights advocates." [CNN, 6/19/11]

McCain Defended Arizona Immigration Law By Claiming "Illegals" Were "Intentionally Causing Accidents On The Freeway." During an interview on "The O'Reilly Factor," McCain was asked "what about the racial profiling" that would result from Arizona's immigration law SB 1070. McCain answered, "I would be very sorry if some of that happens, and I regret it. But I also regret the – really, it's not just the murder of Robert Krentz. It's the people whose homes and property are being violated. It's the drive-by – the drivers of cars with illegals in it that are intentionally causing accidents on the freeway. Look, our border is not secured. Our citizens are not safe. [Fox News, "The O'Reilly Factor," 6/19/10]

McCain Called Arizona Immigration Bill "A Very Important Step Forward." According to Politico, "Sen. John McCain praised a tough Arizona anti-immigration bill that will let police arrest people who aren't carrying identification, the latest move in McCain's rightward shift in advance of a tough Republican Senate primary this summer. 'I think it's a very important step forward,' McCain said Monday. 'I can fully understand why the legislature would want to act.' It's a dramatic switch for a senator who supported comprehensive immigration reform with Democratic lion Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-Mass.) just four years ago. McCain is facing a primary challenge from the right in former Rep. J.D. Hayworth. His office later said his comments did not represent an endorsement, though a spokeswoman would not condemn the bill, either." [Politico, 4/19/10]

In 2010, McCain Joined Filibuster Of Dream Act, Which He Previously Cosponsored. On December 18, 2010, Sen. John McCain voted against cloture on the Dream Act. In a statement, McCain said, "I cannot put the priorities of these students, as difficult and unfair in many respects as their situation is, ahead of my constituents and the American people who demand that the Federal government fulfill its Constitutional duty to secure our borders before we undertake other reforms. Once we fulfill this interview with Human Events, Sen. Marco Rubio was asked, "Are you in favor of creating a path to citizenship for the millions who are here?" Rubio answered, "Well, we have a path to citizenship. It's called coming legally into this country. The ones who are already here. You can't do it." [Human Events, 5/6/10]

Rubio: "You're Never Going To Have A Legal Immigration System That Works If You Grant Amnesty." According to Rubio in an interview with Human Events, "And you're never going to have a legal immigration system that works if you grant amnesty. [...] There are going to be stories of very young kids that were brought to this country at a very young age who don't even speak Spanish that are going to be sent back to Nicaragua or some other place. And it's gonna feel weird and I understand that. The goal here is to have an immigration policy that works. And if you provide a path for people to enter this country illegally and if they stay here long enough and pay enough in taxes, well let them stay legally...why would anyone come in through the legal process?"[Human Events, 5/6/10]

PolitiFact: Rubio Said That The Arizona Immigration Law Would Create A "Police State," Then Later Said He Would Have Voted For The Legislation. According to PolitiFact, "The law, generally speaking, makes being an illegal immigrant a state crime and requires legal immigrants to carry papers that confirm their legal status. On April 27, 2010 in front of a largely Cuban-American crowd in West Miami, Rubio likened Arizona's bill to the creation of a 'police state,' saying the American people wouldn't be comfortable with people being required to have documents on them at all times proving their citizenship status. Then on April 30, he told Fox News' Neil Cavuto that didn't believe the Arizona law was 'the best answer to that problem.' But in an interview with a conservative blogger nine days later, Rubio said he would've voted for the measure." [PolitiFact.com, 5/12/10]

Rubio Said That The Democratic Version Of The DREAM Act Would "Create Incentives For Illegal Immigration, Chain Migration, And All Sorts Of Problems." During an interview with the National Review, Rubio stated, "The problem is that all of the existing policy proposals that are out there like the DREAM Act create amnesty. They create incentives for illegal immigration, chain migration, and all sorts of problems. What I have said is that I believe we can deal with these kids and these circumstances without making all of the DREAM Act's mistakes." [National Review, 3/30/12]

- New York Times Editorial: Rubio's Version Of The DREAM Act Would Not Provide A Path To Citizenship. According to the New York Times Editorial Board, "Senator Marco Rubio of Florida, who has recently been floating his stripped-down version of the Dream Act, a bill to legalize young unauthorized immigrants — Americans in all but name — who serve in the military or go to college. Mr. Rubio's idea to make it palatable to his party is to offer them legalization without citizenship. 'You can legalize someone's status,' he says, 'without placing them on a path toward citizenship.' He warns that if Dream Act youths became citizens, they could — horrors — someday sponsor family members to enter legally. This idea is nothing more than some newly invented third-class status — not illegal, but not American. It's the Dream Act without the dream and should be dismissed out of hand, along with similar half-measures embraced by Mitt Romney and other Republican presidential candidates, who endorse legalization for military service but not college, and not citizenship in any case." [New York Times Editorial, 3/27/12]

Rubio Co-Sponsored Mandatory E-Verify Bill With Senator Grassley. According to The Tampa Bay times, "Sen. Marco Rubio has signed on as a co-sponsor to a bill that would reauthorize the E-Verify employment check system and make it mandatory for all employers. 'I know firsthand the great things that immigration has meant for America,' Rubio said in a statement posted on his website. 'Immigration is woven into the fabric of our nation and is a critical part of our future. But we can't be the only nation in the world that does not enforce its immigration laws. Consistently, I have stated that a modernization of the legal immigration system is impossible unless we must first secure the border and implement an E-Verify system that will help prevent the hiring and exploitation of undocumented workers. That's why I support Senator Charles Grassley's bill to make E-Verify permanent.'" [The Tampa Bay Times, 6/15/11]

Rubio Said That English Should Be The Official Language Of The United States. According to The Miami Herald's Naked Politics blog, "Republican Senate candidate Marco Rubio said only 'nuances' separate his stance on immigration from that of his new ally, U.S. Sen. James DeMint of South Carolina. Rubio, who is Cuban-American, said he agrees with DeMint's position that English should be the official language of the U.S. 'We have to have a common language that unites the people," said Rubio, the former state lawmaker from Miami. 'I'm not in favor of banning other languages, but my name is spelled the same way in Spanish as it is in English.' Lucky for him, since ballots might not be available in Spanish and Creole in Rubio's diverse Miami turf under legislation backed by DeMint that says government documents and services need only be available in English." Barriers To Reform: The Anti-Immigration Policies And Extremist Money Blocking Progress In The Senate

Summary

As immigration reform moves forward in the Senate, the success of any legislation will depend on the cooperation of conservative lawmakers with troubling histories on the issue. However, it is not only their past policy positions and quotes that are disturbing. These key conservative senators also share a history of campaign contributors who also fund extremist anti-immigrant organizations, including those labeled as hate groups by the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Each of the Republican senators in the immigration "gang of eight" have supported extreme positions and aligned themselves with anti-immigrant forces. Beyond the "gang," leading conservatives such as Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, Sens. John Cornyn, Chuck Grassley, David Vitter, and Ted Cruz will figure prominently into the fate of immigration reform despite having similarly concerning records.

Worst Anti-Immigrant Rhetoric

- Rubio on a path to citizenship: "Well, we have a path to citizenship. It's called coming legally into this country."

- McCain on racial profiling: "...drivers of cars with illegals in it that are intentionally causing accidents on the freeway."

- Graham on birthright citizenship: "People come here to have babies...They come here to drop a child. It's called 'drop and leave.'"

- Flake on birthright citizenship: "How in the world can you explain that's a good policy to have? It simply doesn't promote respect for the rule of law."

- Cruz on enforcement: "triple the border patrol; use walls, fences, and technology; end sanctuary cities; repeal Obama's newly ordered amnesty; end benefits like in-state tuition for illegal aliens."

- McConnell on the DREAM Act: "I do not believe we should reward illegal behavior."

- Vitter on the DREAM Act: "I am extremely pleased that the U.S. Senate has once again rejected the illegal alien student bailout known as the DREAM Act."

- Grassley on the DREAM Act: "...discussing another amnesty will only create a rush to the border."

Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL)

Offensive Statements About Rape. According to Politico, "Susan B. Anthony List President Marjorie Dannenfelser said the lawmakers are falling for a trap set by proponents of abortion rights who want to focus the debate on extremes such as rape instead of other abortions. 'It's a tactic to [force pro-life lawmakers to] talk about this rather than the 98 percent of abortions because they know that they lose it,' Dannenfelser said. She said that SBA List is working on a new training program for candidates and lawmakers to 'make sure that in future elections, a candidate can never with a straight face say, 'I never thought about that or I got caught flat-footed.'" conservative forces. "We're not fighting over the middle ground," he said. He grew up in McLean and practices patent law at an intellectual property firm in Arlington. Cuccinelli is a social conservative who opposes access to abortion, without exceptions in the case of rape or incest." [Washington Post, 8/28/02]

Cuccinelli's Website Touted His Efforts To Defund Planned Parenthood. According to a 2009 archived version of Cuccinelli's website, "As a State Senator, I have supported initiatives to: ... Defund (of taxpayer dollars) Planned Parenthood, a multi-billion dollars organization." [Cuccinelli.com, Archived 3/10/2009]

Cuccinelli Compared Anti-Abortion Movement To Slavery Abolitionism. According to the Associated Press, "Virginia Democrats pushed two deeply emotional hot buttons Tuesday in the state's gubernatorial race, slamming Republican Ken Cuccinelli for equating the nation's bloody reckoning over slavery with today's anti-abortion movement. Nearly eight months before election day the Democratic Party of Virginia released video from last June that shows Cuccinelli addressing a small gathering of religious conservatives meeting in Williamsburg. It continues the Democrats' strategy of portraying the socially conservative attorney general as too extreme for a swing state. 'Over time, the truth demonstrates its own rightness, and its own righteousness. Our experience as a country has demonstrated that on one issue after another. Start right at the beginning — slavery. Today, abortion,' Cuccinelli said in remarks recorded by a Democratic Party tracker at a Family Foundation event on June 14, 2012. 'History has shown us what the right position was, and those were issues that were attacked by people of faith aggressively to change the course of this country,' he said. 'We need to fight for the respect for life, not just for life but for respect for life. One leads to the other.'" [Associated Press, 3/19/2013]

SBA List Background Information

An extreme record on women's issues and support of extreme candidates

SBA List Aims To "Reduce And Ultimately End Abortion." According to its website, "The Susan B. Anthony List, and its connected Political Action Committee, the SBA List Candidate Fund, are dedicated to electing candidates and pursuing policies that will reduce and ultimately end abortion. To that end, the SBA List will emphasize the election, education, promotion, and mobilization of pro-life women."[SBA-List.org, accessed 4/19/13]

SBA List's Top Legislative Priorities Are "Defunding Planned Parenthood" And "Ending All Federal Funding Of Abortion." According to its website, "SBA List has two main legislative priorities: ending all federal funding of abortion and ending taxpayer funding to Planned Parenthood." The "Pro-Life Legislation" section of the website includes individual pages for "Defunding Planned Parenthood" and "H.R. 3 No Taxpayer Funding for Abortion Act." [SBA-List.org, accessed 4/18/13]

Marjorie Dannenfelser Is President Of SBA List - Supported Virginia's Mandatory Transvaginal Ultrasound Bill. When Chris Matthews questioned Dannenfelser about a bill in Virginia effectively requiring women to undergo transvaginal ultrasounds before obtaining an abortion, Dannenfelser stated, "Really, this is a matter of giving a woman more information that she needs to make a decision that`s fully informed. [...] The reason the majority of women in Virginia and across the country support this is that they believe in that vulnerable spot in a very difficult place, that more information is better. And making -- there are two decisions to make. One decision is a medical decision. One is about the very contentious, very difficult decision about what is actually happening in an abortion. And that ultrasound speaks to that. It`s science. It`s a scientific opinion backing up a medical reality. And a moral –" Dannenfelser was cut off before completing her sentence. [MSNBC, Hardball, 2/22/12]

SBA List Defended Todd Akin Following His "Legitimate Rape" Comments. According to the Washington Post, "Republican leadership has a not so-subtle-hint for Todd Akin: They would like the Missouri Senate candidate, who remarked that 'legitimate rape' rarely results in pregnancy, out of the race — and sooner rather than later. [...] Pro-life groups, however, have taken a decidedly different take. Both the Susan B. Anthony List and Family Research Council have stood by Akin. They don't see him as a politician who has made a career ending gaffe. In their view, he's a strong abortion right opponent who articulated a tenet of the pro-life movement: Abortion should be illegal in all situations, rape included. 'Todd Akin ... has a record of voting to protect human life,' said Susan B. Anthony List President Marjorie Dannenfelser, reaffirming her support in a statement. He 'has been an excellent partner in the fight for the unborn.'" [Washington Post, 8/21/12]

The President Of Susan B. Anthony List Said "She Couldn't Agree More" With Richard Mourdock's Statement That Pregnancy Resulting From Rape Was "A Gift From God." According to The Courier-Journal, "After setting off a political furor that drew in both presidential campaigns, Indiana Republican Senate candidate Richard Mourdock on Wednesday stood by his comments that pregnancy after rape is 'something that God intended.' [...] The Indiana Right to Life political action committee issued a statement supporting Mourdock. And the head of the Susan B. Anthony List, an anti-abortion group supporting women candidates, said she 'couldn't agree more' with Mourdock's comments." [The Courier-Journal, 10/25/12]

Fact Check: Susan B. Anthony List's Radio Ad Supporting Ken Cuccinelli

Summary

Given that Susan B. Anthony List defended Todd Akin and Richard Mourdock after their extreme comments on pregnancy in cases of rape last year, it's no surprise they also support Ken Cuccinelli's extreme advocacy for unnecessary and burdensome regulations that could force many of the state's 23 abortion clinics to close.

Fact Check

SBA List Radio Ad Attacks McCauliffe Over Abortion Clinic Regulations. According to Politico's "Morning Score," "The anti-abortion group Susan B. Anthony List is targeting Virginia Democratic gubernatorial candidate Terry McAuliffe in new radio ad out today—the first paid advertising so far on behalf of either candidate. In the ad, SBA List goes after McAuliffe for opposing the Virginia Board of Health's new regulations for abortion clinics—measures McAuliffe called an 'unnecessary move' on the part of the state and many pro-abortion rights activists opposed as an attempt to financially cripple abortion clinics. 'In the race for Governor...there's one candidate who has taken extreme positions far outside the mainstream....one candidate whose radical ideas are troubling to every woman in Virginia. It's Terry McAuliffe,' the ad says." [Politico, 4/23/13]

The real facts about the Virginia Board of Health's new regulations for abortion clinics

Cuccinelli Put "Significant Pressure" On The State Board Of Health To "Crackdown On Abortion Clinics" With New Building Codes. According to the Washington Examiner, "The state Board of Health vote on Friday follows two years of contentious debate that included significant pressure from Attorney General and Republican gubernatorial candidate Ken Cuccinelli, who favored a more aggressive crackdown on abortion clinics. Last year, Cuccinelli refused to certify an agreement between health officials to exempt existing clinics from the tougher rules, and he threatened not to represent the board in any legal challenges if it ignored his concerns. Health officials agreed to rewrite the rules so they applied to existing clinics, prompting Health Commissioner Dr. Karen Remley to resign in protest." [Washington Examiner, 4/11/13]

- The New "Burdensome" Building Codes, Such As Parking Lot Size And Hallways Width Mandates, May Force Clinics To Close. According to the Washington Examiner, "Virginia health officials are poised to approve strict new rules for abortion clinics Friday amid massive opposition from pro-choice groups and a governor's race with two candidates closely tied to the opposing sides. Under the new guidelines, clinics would be required to meet the same building codes as hospitals, including bigger parking lots, wider hallways and larger operating rooms. Opponents of the measure say the changes would be burdensome and costly and could force many of the state's 23 providers to close their doors." [Washington Examiner, 4/11/13]

It's Cuccinelli who has the extreme record on a woman's right to choose

Tea Party Express' Kremer: Obama Doesn't Love America "The Way That We Do"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From an appearance by Tea Party Express chair Amy Kremer on CNN's Starting Point, hosted by Soledad O'Brien:

O'BRIEN: Amy, let me ask you a question, because someone sent to me this tweet - I swear to God I can't see anything anymore - that you sent out at the end of August at 10:55 p.m. "Huge difference between Mitt Romney and Barack Obama is that Mitt loves America. We need a president that loves this country." I think that's from - I missed this one, but someone forwarded it to me. Do you think that President Obama doesn't love this country? What does that mean?

KREMER: I think that he is more about a global - being a global - oh, what's the word? Being more one-world, global, with you know other countries and it's not about the shining city on the hill, the greatness that has always been America, that our founding fathers were about. I do believe that. I mean, I absolutely believe it. I'm not going to run from that. Look, I mean, President Obama, and I know I'm going to take a lot of heat from this, but he's never run anything. Mitt Romney – you asked me what is the case for Mitt Romney – Mitt Romney time and time again has taken companies that are failing and turned them around to make them successful. I mean, he turned the Salt Lake City Olympics around. He ran the state of Massachusetts.

KREMER: Because what I'm saying is we are failing. We are about to go off this fiscal cliff. And we need somebody that can turn it around. President Obama has not turned it around. I'm sorry he hasn't -

PHILADELPHIA MAYOR MICHAEL NUTTER: But the governor has also - but the governor has also taken over companies and put people out of work. At the expense of losing jobs and making money for himself and for his investors. If you're going to tell one side of the story, tell the other

MEEUWSEN: Well no, but I think you need a third party here.

ROBERTSON: Yeah, definitely. But that's the problem. She does not understand authority, when she was growing up nobody made her behave, and now you've got a thirteen-year-old in a thirty-year-old woman's body, and she is acting like a child.

MEEUWSEN: Yeah.

ROBERTSON: Now, what do you do with that? You can't divorce her, according to the scripture, so I say move to Saudi Arabia.

Pat Robertson Tells Man With "Rebellious" Wife: "You Could Become A Muslim And You Could Beat Her"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

FACEBO TWITTER

TRANSCRIPT

From the September 10, 2012, edition of The 700 Club, via Right Wing Watch:

TERRY MEEUWSEN (COHOST): This first one comes from Michael who says, "My wife has become a real problem. She has no respect for me as the head of the house. She insults me and she even went as far as stretching her hand to beat me. I've lost my self confidence. Her words hurt so much and she refuses to talk through our problems. Please tell me what I can do."

PAT ROBERTSON (HOST): Well, you could become a Muslim and you could beat her.

MEEUWSEN: But in lieu of that.

ROBERTSON: You don't want to go to Saudi Arabia?

MEEUWSEN: No, no.

ROBERTSON: You know, I think this man has got to stand up to her. And he can't let her get away with this stuff. And you know, I don't know – I don't think we condone wife beating these days, but something's got to be done to make her—

MEEUWSEN: Not physically, but I mean why would she not want to talk through their problems? That's so unlike—

ROBERTSON: She is just totally—Well she's rebellious, and chances are she was rebellious with her father and mother, she's a rebellious child and she doesn't want to submit to any authority. And she probably had temper tantrums when she was a kid and, you know—you know, the little girl, "I hate you, I hate you," and she wants to slap her father. Well that's the same kind of thing. She's just—she's transferred the father now. She might—I hate to say everything's gotta be some psychological counseling, but, you know—

Rep. Cantor: "Traditonal Marriage" Is "More Successful At Allowing For That Pursuit Of Happiness"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

At the Values Voters Summit on September 14, 2012, House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-VA) stated:

> CANTOR: Now, pursuit of happiness. We all know, as do most Americans in their hearts know, that the way for us to allow the pursuit of happiness is through individual effort, it is not through government program. And that is why we believe in traditional marriage. Because marriage, more than any government program ever has or ever will, has lifted up people out of poverty, even those who felt there was no hope. Marriage has proven to be that formula which has been more successful at allowing for that pursuit of happiness and that is why we stand tall and stand proud for traditional marriage.

Bauer: "Creator" In Declaration Of Independence "Is Not The God Of The Quran"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From Gary Bauer's remarks at the 2012 Values Voters Summit on September 14, 2012:

BAUER: The founders put the central idea of our civilization right in the middle of the second paragraph of our Declaration of Independence, where it says, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator--' Memo to the American Civil Liberties Union and these folks demonstrating outside the hotel, that's God. '--endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, among these the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.' That's the central idea of who we are. You know for a lot of people on the left, those words are like fingernails on a chalkboard, because, you see, the left is increasingly radically secular. They don't even believe there's a God, so how can they accept the words of our Founding Fathers, that that God is the author of our liberty. Ladies and gentlemen, the Creator – the God, the Creator in that paragraph, is not just any god. I say this not meaning to offend anyone, but that is not the God of the Quran. And the reason I feel comfortable saying that is that there's countries all over the world that have been established on the perception that they are following the teachings of the Quran. And they are not pleasant places to live. They're not pleasant places to live for women. They're not pleasant places to live for religious minorities. They're not pleasant places to live if you want to follow freedom of conscience.

Rep. Gohmert Thanks "President Barack Hussein Obama" For Helping To "Jump Start A New Ottoman Empire"

Gaffney: ATR's Norquist Is "Working For A Bunch Of Islamists" And "Fragging His Own Team"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

On the August 15 edition of his radio show, Center for Security Policy founder and president Frank Gaffney made the following comments about Americans for Tax Reform president Grover Norquist's support for cuts to defense spending:

> And Grover, obviously, is less concerned about the national security, shall we say. I believe that he's been working for a bunch of Islamists for a long time, which may further explain what he's doing here. But at the very minimum he's got his eye exclusively on the taxes issue. And Jim, I guess what I'm really worried about is, to the extent you have somebody in Republican circles fragging his own team, as Grover Norquist is doing, it can only benefit the opponents and the people who are trying to bring about this train wreck. And maybe that, again, is in the interests of the Muslim Brotherhood – I certainly don't think it's in the interests of the United States.

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From the American Family Association's "Focal Point" radio show, hosted by AFA director of issues analysis Bryan Fischer, on August 20, 2012:

> FISCHER: So what Todd Akin is talking about is when you've got a real, genuine rape, a case of forcible rape, a case of assault rape, where a woman has been violated against her will through the use of physical force, where it's physically traumatic for her, he says in those circumstances the woman's body, because of the trauma that's been inflicted on her, it may interfere with the normal functioning processes of her body that lead to conception and pregnancy. There's a very delicate and complex mix of hormones that take place that are released in a woman's body, and if that gets interfered with, it may make it impossible for her or difficult in that particular circumstance to conceive a child. That's all Todd Akin is saying. The brute force trauma of that event may inhibit her body's ability to have that act of rape result in conception. That's all he's saying and he's absolutely right about that. [via Right Wing Watch]

Rep. Jordan: People On Food Stamps Think It's "Okay For Someone Else To Be Responsible For Them Being Fed"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From Rep. Jim Jordan's (R-OH) August 4, 2012, speech at RedState Gathering:

REP. JIM JORDAN (R-OH): Finally I want to mention this: It's not just about the money. That's important, but it's the cultural concerns as well. I mean, I never– I never intended to get involved in politics. I was a wrestling coach. I was assistant wrestling coach at Ohio State University. I was gonna help student athletes try to get to their goals and dreams on the wrestling mat, and I liked doing that. But you get married, you have kids, you start looking at the world different. You get tired of government taking your money, insulting your values, telling you what to do. And I decided to run for office. And the cultural concerns are one of the things that got me involved in politics. We do also – while we're working on the things I described – we do also have to remember that life is precious and we should protect it. That family is important, it's the first institution the good lord put together. Before the state, before the church, it was the family, and we should—we should have policies that emphasize those key facts as well– Think about this. Forty-eight million Americans today are on food stamps. One in seven Americans now believe it is okay for someone else to be responsible for them being fed. That is sad. The greatest country in the world, one in seven.

PA State Rep. Metcalfe: 47 Percent "Living Off The Public Dole" Likely "Too Lazy" To Get ID To Vote

FACEBO TWITTER

TRANSCRIPT

From a September 19, 2012, interview with Pennsylvania state Rep. Daryl Metcalf (R) on KDKA's Mike Pintek show, via ThinkProgress:

> METCALFE: Ultimately, the burden isn't on the state to make sure every individual does what they have to do to get their ID card. I mean, individuals have certain responsibilities in securing their ID. They have to present the documents needed. The state doesn't have that burden. I think the individual does, and I think it ultimately is a great travesty of justice to violate the rights of millions to have their legally cast vote protected for the special interests of a few individuals that are too lazy to get out there and get done what they have to to get their ID card.

> MIKE PINTEK (HOST): Okay, are you absolutely convinced, and do you have assurances and can you give us assurances that the methods to implement this law are effective and will in fact make sure that no legitimate voter will be disenfranchised?

> METCALFE: Yes. I don't believe any legitimate voter that actually wants to exercise that right and takes on the according responsibility that goes with that right to secure their photo ID will be disenfranchised. You know, we have – as Mitt Romney said, 47 percent of the people that are living off the public dole, living off of their neighbors' hard work, and we have a lot of people out there that are too lazy to get off and – you know, to get up and get out there and get the ID they need. So, I mean, if individuals are too lazy, the state can't fix that.

system of earned success where people are rewarded for their effort, they're rewarded for their merit, they're rewarded for their sacrifice and their hard work. Rep. Southerland: President Obama "Believes In Redistribution, And I Think That Is Evil"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

FACEBO TWITTER

TRANSCRIPT

From an interview Rep. Steve Southerland (R-FL) gave to Newsmax:

KATHLEEN WALTER (HOST): This week a video surfaced of Barack Obama advocating redistribution of wealth back in 1998, which critics say confirms he embraces socialist philosophies. In another video which surfaced earlier in the week, Mitt Romney is heard stating that President Obama's supporters, 47 percent of the electorate, want to live off government handouts and don't care for their lives. Do you think the nation is at a tipping point right now? Are we on the brink of becoming a socialist country should Obama win reelection?

SOUTHERLAND: Well, let me say this. I did not need to see Barack Obama in a video about redistribution to make my determination that he believes in socialist policies. I think redistribution is the centerpiece of a socialist mindset. But if you look at his policies, if you look at the policies of redistribution in the name of fairness, and he says fairness over and over and over and over again, and what he means by fair is we're going to take from those who work and we're going to give to those who don't, and as is evident in his most recent change to the TANF policies, that – where there was obviously a work requirement – I think what you're seeing with this president is he's a divider. He is not a uniter.

And I think that when Governor Romney made his statement— I need to be very careful here, I think there are many people who do receive checks from the federal government that have, that are retired, that served in our armed services, that paid into Medicare, paid into Social Security. So I don't like the term entitlement, because many people that do receive government checks are entitled to those because they paid in. But there is a large, large portion of individuals who receive entitlements from the federal government and they've not earned them, or not worked to keep those. And so I think we have to be very careful who we talk about. Words can be dangerous, and so I think we need to be very specific.

What I believe the governor was trying to get across, as I listened to his video, is that we want a country. It's pretty bizarre.

Gingrich: Obama "Is A One-Sided Apologist For Islamic Extremists While He Is Attacking Christianity"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From a September 25, 2012, appearance by Newt Gingrich on Fox News' On the Record with Greta Van Susteren:

GINGRICH: For 10 days after the Benghazi attack, the Obama administration denied it was a terrorist attack.

GRETA VAN SUSTEREN (HOST): That's a different issue.

GINGRICH: No.

VAN SUSTEREN: That is a profoundly different issue.

GINGRICH: But after Carney that morning said, 'Okay everybody now concedes it's a terrorist act,' the same afternoon, Obama went back to the, 'Oh, it's really caused by the film.' I think it's because he wasn't coordinating.

VAN SUSTEREN: Well, he was talking about the film today, which was sort of interesting. He's talking about the video before the U.N. in his speech and talking about how, you know, we don't insult the—we should not tolerate insulting religions, yet there was no mention of the fact that Ahmadinejad is going to be speaking tomorrow on the holiest day of the Jewish faith, Yom Kippur, so that he spoke about the insult to the Muslim world with this video, but he neglected to talk about the insult to Jews, while he's dissing the prime minister of Israel.

GINGRICH: Well, it's worse—From an American perspective, it's worse than that. Obama spent I think three paragraphs on a nutcake film that nobody had seen. Meanwhile, in the same city as Cardinal Dolan, who has openly said the Obama administration's waging war on the Catholic church. Now why is Obama fixated on appeasing Muslims while attacking Catholics? And why is that not a topic that ought to be on every network talk show? I mean here's a president who is a one-sided apologist for Islamic extremists while he is attacking Christianity in his own

Rep. Broun: Evolution, Embryology, Big Bang Theory Are "Lies Straight From The Pit Of Hell"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From Rep. Paul Broun's (R-GA) remarks at the Liberty Baptist Church Sportsman's Banquet on September 27, 2012, in Hartwell, Georgia:

BROUN: God's word is true. I've come to understand that. All that stuff I was taught about evolution and embryology and the Big Bang Theory, all that is lies straight from the pit of Hell. And it's lies to try to keep me and all the folks who were taught that from understanding that they need a savior. You see, there are a lot of scientific data that I've found out as a scientist that actually show that this is really a young Earth. I don't believe that the Earth's but about 9,000 years old. I believe it was created in six days as we know them. That's what the Bible says.

And what I've come to learn is that it's the manufacturer's handbook, is what I call it. It teaches us how to run our lives individually, how to run our families, how to run our churches. But it teaches us how to run all of public policy and everything in society. And that's the reason as your congressman I hold the Holy Bible as being the major directions to me of how I vote in Washington, D.C., and I'll continue to do that.

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

At a Freedomworks "Call to Action" Rally on September 15, 2012, Ohio Liberty Council President and Portage County Tea Party Executive Director Tom Zawistowski said:

> ZAWISTOWSKI: So my question to you is, are they going to win this election? Are we going to win this election? Who's going to win this election? We are! Who's going to win this election? We are! About a week ago I sent out an email to all the patriot leaders in Ohio to give to their members. In that email I said that we all need to fight this war as if we're the only ones in it. We need to fight this war in our hometown the best way we know how. Not to listen to anybody else, but to see with our own eyes and hear with our own ears and do the things we know that will win this election. Santorum Dismisses Marriage Equality: "Are Some Things Better Than Other Things?"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

From Rick Santorum's remarks at a Family Policy Institute of Washington dinner on October 9, 2012, in Spokane:

> They asked about the issue, one of the questions, about equality. My response to him on the issue of equality, which you are going to be hearing, marriage equality: Are all things equal? Is everything equal to everything else? Or are there differences? Are some things better than other things? Are some things more worthy of support than other things? Equality is a great term, just like freedom is a great term. But in excess it undermines the virtue that each is. The greatest threat to freedom is unbridled freedom. Everybody going out and doing whatever they want to do. Red light, green light, I don't care, I'm free. The greatest threat to equality is equality that shows no discernment, has no basis for value.

E.W. Jackson: Obama Is "Not A Christian," Thinks He's "Smarter Than God"

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

FACEBO TWITTER

TRANSCRIPT

In an interview with the Daily Caller's Ginni Thomas, Bishop E.W. Jackson said:

> President Barack Obama is not a Christian. He's not a Christian. Now it's just that plain and simple. You say, "Well who are you? How do you have the right?" Well the Bible says, "By their fruits shall you know them," and it's clear from everything he says and everything he does that Christianity is not part of his thinking. The proof is there for anybody who wants to see it so it shouldn't come as a surprise to us. For example, he stood in Cairo and said we're not a Christian nation. Now what Christian thinks of America and wants to declare to the Muslim nations we're not a Christian nation? He has said he doesn't believe the Bible, they are esoteric texts that he doesn't bother with because those couldn't possibly be right. He said we should all admire same-sex marriage. Now the Bible condemns it. Doesn't condemn the people but it condemns the behavior. He says we should admire it. So that means he thinks he's obviously smarter than the Bible and smarter than God. Now, no Christian, even if we don't quite live up to all that the Bible calls us to do, is gonna stand up and say, "Well, I've got a better idea, and we ought to think about it this way rather than that way."

Rep. Foxx Invokes Holocaust In Talk On 'Eroding' Religious Freedom

HOW RADICAL IS THIS CLIP?

TRANSCRIPT

During an October 20, 2012, Stand Up For Religious Freedom Rally in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, Rep. Virginia Foxx (R-NC) said:

> FOXX: We are allowing our freedoms to be eroded a little at a time. We now have very clearly a position that wants to take our most basic freedom away from us. If we allow that to happen we are literally cooked, because the rest of the freedoms will go away also. So we've got to stand up for it, we have got to make sure that we do the right things. I have often made this little speech on the floor of the house because I feel so strongly about this and I have for a long time. There's another way to consider the significance of the time we're in, and you might be able to convince some unbelievers by using the words of German pastor Martin Niemoller, and again, many of you will know this. "First they came for the socialists and I didn't speak out because I wasn't a socialist. Then they came for the trade unionists and I didn't speak out because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Jews and I didn't speak out because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for me, and there was no one left to speak for me." Folks, that's where we are. That is where we are. So we have to speak up for our fellow Americans, those who may not understand the significance of the situation that we're in. We want our children and grandchildren to enjoy a free America that continues to protect the rights of conscience. And it is up to us to make sure that that is the country that we leave to our posterity. If we allow the freedom of religion to be undermined then all the rest of our freedoms are gone.

A prime example of the Chamber's willingness to peddle its influence in aid of its big donors is its interminable opposition to the health care reform law. After receiving over $100 million from the health insurance industry in 2009-10, it has lobbied Congress, aired, set up anti-health care front groups, and even sought to hire an economist to conduct a study it had already determined would conclude that the health care law would kill jobs and harm the economy. Just before the law's passage, the Chamber was spending $800,000 a day in an attempt to kill reform. After the Affordable Care Act passed, the Chamber's efforts continued, publicly backing repeal of the law and pouring money into ads against pro-health care reform candidates in the lead-up to the 2010 and 2012 election cycles.

The Chamber has also worked against Wall Street reform, expansions of the Family and Medical Leave Act, environmental regulation, and global warming legislation – all in the name of protecting business' bottom line. Its work to turn the public and lawmakers against policies designed to curb climate change, in defiance of the scientific consensus, prompted a few high profile members, including Apple, a couple of utilities companies, and several local chambers, to withdraw their membership.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

About

The country's largest business association, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce claims to represent the interests of over 3 million businesses, whose dues it funnels into a bevy of pro-corporate and pro-industry lobbying activities and political ads. Using its massive revenue intake – nearly $200 million in 2010 – the Chamber has topped the list of big spenders on lobbying every year since 2001, spending a total of well over $850 million since 1998. As of the end of May, the Chamber had already spent over $26 million on lobbying in 2012 alone.

Meanwhile, nearly $33 million of the Chamber's 2010 revenue was spent on electioneering communications, the most of any group that was not a national party committee. The Chamber aired over 25,000 ads between August 1 and Election Day, and has pledged to spend $50 million on 2012 House and Senate races. As a 501(c)(6) nonprofit, the Chamber is permitted to keep its donors secret.

The Chamber was founded in 1912 at the request of President Taft to counterbalance the labor movement with a formal organization representing business interests. Tom Donohue has served as the group's president since 1997, when he replaced Richard Lesher after congressional Republicans targeted the Chamber over Lesher's decision to support President Clinton's health care reform efforts. Donohue, by contrast, has been careful to primarily support GOP policies, and it was he who revamped the Chamber's fundraising to draw more heavily on large corporations in exchange for increased influence. Donohue's salary is tied heavily to his success as a fundraiser; three-quarters of the $4.7 million he pulled in in 2010 was "bonus and incentive compensation."

Over the course of the Obama administration, the Chamber has made hay over a variety of Democratic policies, working fervently against health care reform and Wall Street Reform in particular. But while the Chamber undeniably has aligned itself with the Republican Party – it participates, for example, in Karl Rove's secretive ad coordination meetings – its priorities do not always line up with strict conservative ideology. The Chamber supported the Wall Street bailout, the bailout of the auto industry, and the Recovery Act, all of which have drawn conservative ire. It has also spoken out against Arizona's anti-immigrant law. Instead, the Chamber's positions can be summed up by its blind support for big business; it seeks to thwart any legislation that would impose fees or other impositions on its most well-heeled members, without regard for national interests or, at times, for the preferences of small businesses.

Indeed, those 3 million businesses the U.S. Chamber claims to represent likely number closer to 300,000; a 2009 inquiry found that the Chamber was counting the businesses belonging to local chambers among its members, while veritable dues-payers are probably merely a tenth of what it proclaims. A relatively small number of those provide a disproportionately large share of the Chamber's revenue, likely giving them outsized influence over the Chamber's priorities. In 2008, for example, a full third of the Chamber's revenue came from just 19 sources. In addition, the Chamber's board, which exercises control over the group's leadership, is disproportionately comprised of representatives of large corporations.

About

While most right-wing think tanks churn out studies and papers providing intellectual justification for conservative policy ideas, the American Legislative Exchange Council's method of impacting public policy is markedly different. Acting as a sort of consortium, ALEC brings together state legislators, who pay $50 a year to join, and private-sector businesses, which pay dues ranging from $7,000 to $25,000, to discuss public policy and draft model state-level legislation. ALEC's lawmaker members often introduce those model bills, sometimes word-for-word, in their home states. Although it purports to be "non-partisan," code words like "limited government" and the fact that 24 out of the 26 state legislators on its board of directors are registered Republicans broadcast ALEC's conservative perspective.

This centralized public-private legislative laboratory is a big part of the reason that conservative state-level bills often come in spates. The most notorious of these, brought to light in the wake of the death of 15-year-old Trayvon Martin, is Florida's "Stand Your Ground" law. ALEC, in concert with the National Rifle Association, has successfully pushed versions of Florida's statute in dozens of other states. Voter ID laws and other electoral restrictions, which in practice do little to combat the much-ballyhooed non-issue of voter fraud but do serve to disenfranchise groups likely to vote Democratic, have similar origins. After groups like Color of Change publicized the ties between ALEC's corporate members and these measures, a number of high-profile businesses elected to withdraw from ALEC, and shortly thereafter, ALEC issued a statement pledging to focus on economic issues and do away with the Public Safety and Elections task force that generated the controversial bills.

Other initiatives pushed by ALEC with some success align even more directly with a plainly conservative agenda. In addition to legislation that would deprive the government of revenue – "starve the beast" – a notable chunk of ALEC's legislative priorities seek to edge public functions toward privatization. On everything from prisons to public schools to health care, ALEC consistently turns out model bills that would prune back government's responsibilities and turn them into new streams of private-sector revenue for its corporate members.

Although as a 501(c)(3) ALEC does not have to disclose its donors, among its sources of cash is the unabashedly right-wing Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation. It also benefits from Koch money; the Kochs' business sits on ALEC's board, and the Koch brothers lent ALEC a half-million dollars when the council was on rocky financial ground in the '90s. Foundation contributions like Bradley's and corporate member dues like Koch's account for the majority of ALEC's $7 million budget.

variety of bills pushing a conservative evangelical agenda. One would have provided for "daily time of silent prayer in Louisiana public schools." Another was the nation's first "Covenant Marriage" law, which created a second variety of state-sanctioned marriage in Louisiana that is much more difficult to enter into or to end via divorce than a standard legal marriage.

His political career ended when he lost a 2002 GOP primary for the U.S. Senate, partly because questions arose about Perkins' ties to white nationalist figures. According to the Southern Poverty Law Center, in 1996 Perkins paid to use former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard David Duke's mailing list on behalf of Woody Jenkins' Senate campaign, which Perkins was managing – and then tried to cover it up by filing false disclosure forms. He's also spoken before a white nationalist group called the Council of Conservative Citizens.

Family Research Council

About

Tony Perkins' objective is to "reclaim the culture for Christ" by influencing public policy, a goal he has pursued most prominently as the president of the Family Research Council (FRC) since 2003. FRC, which has been dubbed an anti-gay hate group by the Southern Poverty Law Center, bills itself as "the leading voice for the family in our nation's halls of power" and throws itself into the various conservative social issues, including abortion, pornography, marriage equality (or what it calls "counterfeit marriage"), and religious liberty, that are denoted by its promise to advance "faith, family and freedom." FRC's legislative arm, Family Research Council Action, hosts the Values Voters Summit, an annual gathering of the religious right that consistently draws the biggest names in conservative politics.

As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, FRC is funded mostly through tax-deductible donations, lately in the range of $11-13 million per year. FRC's notable funders include the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation and the Friess Family Foundation, among others. According to its tax filings, in 2009 the organization spent a total of $12.5 million, $4.7 million of which went towards influencing public policy, including the production of "research papers, legal briefs, and regular publications." Another $350,000 went to lobbying. One project it proudly highlights on its 990 is a documentary on what it calls the "dangerous" Employment Non-Discrimination Act. FRC takes credit for thwarting the advancement of that legislation, which would have protected LGBT employees against unwarranted firings and other discrimination based on their sexual orientation or gender identity, an effort Perkins belittled as "the Crossdresser Protection Act."

Like labeling an anti-discrimination bill "dangerous," the effort to frame the extension of equal rights and protections to LGBT people as an infringement upon the rights or religious freedoms of others permeates the FRC's approach to many topics. Its stated position on "homosexual conduct" is that it is "harmful to the persons who engage in it and to society at large." It has produced an entire brochure titled "The Other Side of Tolerance: How Homosexual Activism Threatens Liberty." In another pamphlet, Peter Sprigg, an FRC Senior Fellow for Policy Studies, has listed the top 10 ways that "society could be harmed by legalizing same-sex 'marriage'" (scare quotes original), including a warning about legalized polygamy and some rather gloomy predictions about growing legions of fatherless children.

Perkins himself is prone to making outlandish statements. He has called the Violence Against Women Act – an anti-domestic violence bill that funds shelters and hotlines – "a cheap political trick" and "a slush fund for the feminist lobby." He has dismissed bullying as a factor in a trend of suicides among gay teens, explaining that LGBT kids are driven to depression because they know homosexuality is "abnormal." He has perpetuated the outright lie that gay men are more likely to be pedophiles. Yet Perkins' hateful rhetoric hasn't gotten him or other FRC representatives barred from the major cable news channels, where they frequently appear during segments on social issues. Notably, Perkins was able to become a major public voice railing against the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," which he said would expose soldiers to sexual assault and HIV and weaken the military to the point that it "just does parades and stuff."

Prior to joining FRC, Perkins, a graduate of evangelical right-winger Jerry Falwell's Liberty University, served two terms as a Louisiana state representative, where he authored a

Americans for Tax Reform

About

"Americans for Tax Reform (ATR) opposes all tax increases as a matter of principle," declares an italicized sentence prominently featured on Americans for Tax Reform's website. Indeed, the 501(c)(4) lobbying organization would prefer to see tax revenue shrink to the point that most public programs are starved of their operating budgets and government becomes small enough that, in the words of ATR's president Grover Norquist, one could "drag it into the bathroom and drown it in the bathtub."

To give its principle teeth, ATR asks all candidates for office to sign its Taxpayer Protection Pledge, a promise not only to "oppose any and all efforts to increase the marginal income tax rates for individuals and/or businesses" but also to work against the elimination of deductions or credits. Signed by the vast majority of Republican lawmakers over the last quarter-century, the pledge is a means of ensuring that they think twice about giving any ground on legislation that would raise revenue, even to pay for essential and popular programs. In 2010, ATR spent over $2 million of its $12.4 million in revenue on its pledge campaign.

Lawmakers who violate the pledge – or who neglect to sign it – often face a well-funded effort to undermine them in their home districts; leading up to the 2010 midterm elections, ATR paid for over 4,000 political ads, spending over $8 million. In 2011, ATR's influence was part of what stymied negotiations to raise the debt ceiling – a relatively routine legislative matter to allow the government to pay its bills – because the congressional GOP refused to compromise on new tax revenue.

Norquist is both the frontman and the soul of ATR's operation, appearing on television, speaking at conservative events, and making personal calls to lawmakers who stray outside the fold. He started ATR in 1985, when President Ronald Reagan's administration asked him to helm a group pushing for reforms to the tax code, and he has held an increasingly influential role in American politics since then. In the 1990s, he contributed to Newt Gingrich's Contract with America. He hosts the infamous Wednesday meetings at ATR's headquarters, weekly gatherings where influential conservative leaders establish common priorities and coordinate to advance the conservative movement.

In 2008, ATR launched the Center for Fiscal Accountability, which seeks to subject government's finances to public scrutiny and annually calculates the "Cost of Government Day," the day on which the amount the average American has earned equals his or her portion of that year's government spending. An associated 501(c)(3), Americans for Tax Reform Foundation, furthers ATR's small-government objective by "educat[ing] taxpayers on the true cost of government."

About

The American Action Network (AAN), a 501(c)(4) non-profit started in 2010, calls itself an "action tank," and pledges to "promote center-right policies" by "engaging the hearts and minds of the American people and spurring them into active participation in our democracy."

In practice, this means that AAN works to influence the political landscape by spending money in key political races to the benefit of Republicans. Its expenditures usually take the form of ad buys, but it also uses its money on polling, canvassing, and phone banking. In 2011, the watchdog group Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington asked the Internal Revenue Service to investigate whether AAN was violating its non-profit tax status by running ads designed to negatively reflect on Democratic members of Congress by associating them with unfavorable legislation.

Former Sen. Norm Coleman (R-MN) is chairman the group, and GOP political operative Fred Malek is a founder and a member of the board. Malek, a former member of the Nixon administration, is most infamous for his involvement with Nixon's effort to demote or transfer Jews working at the Bureau of Labor Statistics, a scandal that forced Malek to resign from his leadership role at the Republican National Committee in 1988. AAN's current president is former National Republican Congressional Committee Political Director Brian Walsh, who follows original president Rob Collins, a former aide to Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA). An associated policy organization, the American Action Forum, is chaired by Malek and headed by former CBO director Douglas Holtz-Eakin.

On the heels of spending that totaled over $26 million on the 2010 federal elections, AAN is diving into 2012. In mid-2011, the group launched a $1 million campaign against House Democrats, accusing them of attempting to tamper with Medicare and "balance the budget on the backs of seniors." It also got involved with some key Republican primaries, supporting incumbent senators Orrin Hatch (R-UT) and Dick Lugar (R-IN). In July, AAN announced a $10 million effort to boost grassroots Republican efforts in places with weak state parties, and the affiliated Congressional Leadership Fund super PAC – also chaired by Coleman – reserved $6 million of air time in the fall.

While AAN's tax status protects its donors' anonymity, the Republican Jewish Coalition gave the group a hefty $4 million in 2010, and it has also received a "major grant" ($500,000) from Karl Rove-linked Crossroads GPS. AAN once shared office space with the latter group, and collaborated with it on 2010 races.

Restore Our Future

About

Restore Our Future was founded by a trio of former Romney '08 staffers with deep ties to the Republican establishment. Carl Forti casts the longest shadow, given his role as political director to American Crossroads and his consultancy's connection to numerous other outside spending groups on the right.

Charles Spies, chief counsel and CFO to Romney '08 and lobbyist to Steve Wynn's casino empire, is a veteran of the RNC and RGA during the Bush years, and worked at the FEC in 1999. After a decade of loyal service to the party, Spies helped launch Restore Our Future in October 2010, and serves as the group's Treasurer.

The third founding board member, according to a 2011 press release from Forti's Black Rock Group consultancy, is ad guru Larry McCarthy. McCarthy is the mind behind the infamous Willie Horton ad that helped George H. W. Bush win the White House in 1988. His firm, McCarthy Hennings Media, is one of the primary ad contractors used by Forti's armada.

In the summer of 2011, Steve Roche left his job as fundraising director for the Romney campaign to help make rain for ROF. Roche's firm was then paid $2 million this winter for its role in raising twelve times that much for ROF.

This team of Romney campaign alumni aimed a howitzer of negative ads at the GOP nominee's primary opponents throughout the winter and spring. According to the Washington Post's analysis of TV ad data, ROF committed 83 percent of its $27.3 million in TV spending since last November to attacks on either primary opponents or President Obama. According to the Center for Responsive Politics, ROF has spent a total of $60.6 million over the cycle, including overhead, and held $21.5 million cash-on-hand at the end of June.

ROF's top donors include Las Vegas casino magnate Sheldon Adelson; Texas homebuilder Bob Perry, who also contributes heavily to American Crossroads; and energy developer William Koch, the brother of billionaires David and Charles.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

Americans for Prosperity

About

The Koch brothers enjoy vast influence in the conservative movement, sustained partly through direct political contributions from their company's PAC and grants to ideologically friendly nonprofits from their family's charitable foundations. But perhaps no initiative is more crucial to the Kochs' political efforts than Americans for Prosperity, the self-described "grassroots" organization best known for helping fuel the rise of the Tea Party movement.

David Koch founded Americans for Prosperity (AFP) in 2004 after internal divisions caused Citizens for a Sound Economy, another Koch-founded entity, to dissolve into two new groups. (The other became FreedomWorks.) Together with its companion "educational" foundation, AFP has become a leading force in anti-government activism, especially in the Obama era.

In addition to hosting the annual "Defending the American Dream Summit," AFP has organized nationwide protests against a variety of policy proposals. Those efforts include the "Hot Air Tour" opposing legislative responses to alleged "climate alarmism," and "Hands Off My Health Care" rallies protesting health care reform. In 2009, AFP played a major role in establishing the Tea Party as a national movement, planning events and partnering with organizers all over the country.

However, AFP's activities are not limited to "issue"-based activism; the group is also an active participant in the electoral process. In 2010, AFP ran more than 10,000 television ads in the three months preceding the midterm elections, placing it among the most prolific spenders of the cycle. Furthermore, AFP is one of Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker's most important backers. Since his election, AFP has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on ads supporting Walker's anti-union policies and defending his record in the face of recall efforts.

The group's president, Tim Phillips, has indicated that AFP plans to increase its spending from around $40 million for the midterms to "more than $100 million." The origin of those funds is mostly unknown, since AFP's 501(c)(4) advocacy arm and 501(c)(3) foundation can both accept unlimited anonymous contributions. Although the organization boasts of having more than 90,000 individual donors, AFP is rumored to get much of its funding from the Kochs. Tax forms filed with the IRS reveal that the Koch-controlled Claude R. Lambe Foundation has donated at least $4.6 million to AFP Foundation since 2005, while the David H. Koch Charitable Foundation gave an additional $1 million in 2008. The big-spending Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation also reported combined contributions to the foundation of $520,000 in 2009-10.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

American Crossroads

About

Hatched by GOP power players at Karl Rove's D.C. home in the spring of 2010, American Crossroads has quickly supplanted the Republican National Committee as the hub of the party's electioneering apparatus. The group raises millions from individuals and corporations to spread Republican narratives and defeat Democrats, primarily through advertising.

Led by president Steven Law, a Republican operative with close ties to Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY), Crossroads also draws on the strategic experience and institutional connections of veteran GOP insiders Carl Forti and Mike Duncan. (Forti is Mitt Romney's former political director who helped launch the pro-Romney super PAC, Restore Our Future.) And as you might expect from the man once known as "Bush's brain," Rove's Crossroads characterizes progressive ideas about taxes, energy, and economics as insidious threats to the nation.

The super PAC's affiliate, Crossroads GPS, was created after disclosure requirements hindered American Crossroads' fundraising in its first few months of existence. As Politico put it in late 2010, "fundraising took off" thanks to the anonymity afforded donors by GPS' tax status. As a tax-exempt 501(c)(4) "social welfare" organization, GPS is constrained to advocacy on issues (such as branding the Deepwater Horizon oil spill "Obama's Katrina"), and cannot spend more than half its funds on electoral advocacy. A substantial piece of the money GPS takes in gets redistributed to groups with more specific missions, like Americans for Tax Reform, National Right to Life, the Center for Individual Freedom and the National Federation of Independent Business. But its primary value to the right comes in the form of carefully worded "issue" ads deriding Democratic policy positions and instructing viewers to, for example, call a candidate's office to voice their displeasure.

If conservative think tanks provide the movement's central ideas, the Rove groups provide the muscle. After spending at least $39 million helping conservatives retake the U.S. House in 2010 – political director Carl Forti claims the actual number is $70 million, including spending they did not have to disclose – American Crossroads and its affiliate Crossroads GPS announced their intention to raise $120 million for the 2012 elections. Then they doubled that public goal. Then former Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour (R) came on board as a fundraiser, and the groups raised expectations all the way to $300 million for the first presidential election year of the super PAC era.

American Crossroads' top donors this cycle include Harold Simmons, Bob Perry, and Joseph Craft, while Crossroads GPS has reportedly received eight-figure contributions from Las Vegas casino moguls Sheldon Adelson and Steve Wynn.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

Walton Family Foundation

About

Three of the six members of the Walton family who occupy space on the Forbes 400 list of the richest Americans are in the top ten, and a fourth ranks at number 11. They have a collective worth of about $100 billion, and as of 2007, the family commanded more wealth than the entire bottom 30 percent of Americans. They use their disproportionate capital to exert a disproportionate influence over American politics.

The family's wealth is the legacy of Walmart founder Sam Walton and his brother James, a co-founder. Just under 50 percent of the company's publicly traded shares are still owned by the family company, Walton Enterprises. Although Sam Walton wasn't particularly involved in politics, his children and those of his brother (plus one widowed daughter-in-law, Christy Walton, who currently ranks as the richest woman in the world) have become increasingly political since the late 1990s. They supported President George W. Bush, donating $2.6 million to Progress for America in support of his re-election. During Bush's tenure, Walton Enterprises hired a lobbyist to push for a low-tax agenda that included the repeal of the estate tax. The 2012 election cycle's contributions from Walton family members, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, "favor the right decisively." They've given at least $400,000 to pro-Mitt Romney super PAC Restore our Future, and also supported a super PAC favoring Jon Huntsman.

Through the Walton Family Foundation, whose board of directors consists entirely of members of the family, the Waltons hand out a few hundred million dollars per year in charitable donations. In 2010, the foundation's giving totaled nearly $1.5 billion, thanks largely to an $800 million grant to establish the Crystal Bridges art museum in Arkansas.

While the charities the foundation supports vary widely, of particular interest are environmental conservation and "school choice," the semi-privatization of the public school system through vouchers and charter schools. In 2011, the foundation's school choice grants exceeded $159 million, $58 million of which was spent on initiatives seeking to impact public policy. The top recipients were the Charter School Growth Fund, followed by Teach for America, to which the foundation has pledged nearly $50 million over the next five years.

The foundation has also donated generously to the conservative infrastructure. A top recipient over the years has been the Hoover Institution, receiving over $4 million. Over $1.5 million has gone to the Center for Policy Studies. Grover Norquist's Americans for Tax Reform, the Manhattan Institute, and the climate science skeptics at the Heartland Institute have each gotten hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Cato Institute and the Heritage Foundation have received tens of thousands.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

About

Although his name is unfamiliar even among many political circles, television and entertainment magnate Jerry Perenchio is a major Republican donor whose most notable contributions have included $9 million to the Progress for America Fund, which supported George W. Bush's agenda throughout his two terms as president.

Perenchio, ranked on at #190 on the Forbes 400 list of richest Americans as of September 2012, made most of his $2.4 billion through the 2007 sale of Univision, which he bought in 1992 with two partners and which, as president, chairman and CEO from 1992 until the time of the sale, he shepherded to its current status as the foremost American Spanish-language media provider. Perenchio has been involved with the entertainment industry since the late 1950s, when he started working for MCA as a talent agent. After the Department of Justice, invoking antitrust laws, forced MCA to split up in the '60s, Perenchio started his own agency, Chartwell Artists, which represented the likes of Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor. He's been behind a series of recognizable television shows, movies, and events: everything from The Jeffersons to Blade Runner and Driving Miss Daisy, plus the 1971 prizefight between Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali. Perenchio has also enriched himself by buying and selling companies, including the Loews theater chain.

A major contributor to state politics, Perenchio was one of Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's biggest benefactors, donating at least $2.25 million. He's also given nearly $8.5 million to the California Republican Party, and has supported campaigns for various propositions, including a 2005 proposition to reform teacher tenure. As for national politics, Perenchio was a bundler for Sen. John McCain in 2008, directing at least $500,000 to his presidential campaign. In the 2012 cycle, Perenchio's prominent contributions included $1.5 million dollars to the pro-Romney group Restore Our Future and $2.5 million to Karl Rove's American Crossroads.

While Perenchio has been averse to publicity – he once told a Los Angeles Times reporter, "I really don't want my name in the goddamn paper," and he holds as a central business tenet that he and his employees must "stay clear of the press" – he hasn't managed to escape some negative stories on his business practices. In 2000, after contract negotiations failed, a group of Univision employees from a Fresno station went on a hunger strike to demand pay equal to what their English-language equivalents made. In 2003, when Univision was seeking federal approval for a merger that would grant it control of the vast majority Hispanic media, a Democratic congressman alleged that the company had been airing programming designed to promote a Bush nominee in order to curry favor with the administration.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.

About

Leveraged buyout specialist John W. Childs dug deep into his pockets in June 2012, handing out $1 million to Romney super PAC Restore Our Future, $1 million to the Club for Growth, and $500,000 to American Crossroads. Although Childs has been a generous political donor over the last three decades – dubbed a "Republican ATM" in the late 1990s for largesse that put him near the top of the Republican donor list – his June donations nearly doubled the more than $3.3 million he and his wife had given up to that point.

Childs founded private equity firm J.W. Childs in 1995 after leaving his number-two position at Thomas H. Lee Company, where he oversaw the $135 million purchase of Snapple – and its resale for $1.7 billion. His company specializes in leveraged buyouts, and is currently invested in companies like NutraSweet, Brookstone, and Sunny D, according to the company's website. In 2008, after the firm tried and failed to raise $2.5 billion to create a new fund, its special purpose acquisition corporation went public.

In addition to his most recent contributions, Childs gave over $600,000 dollars to Club for Growth in 2010, plus another $125,000 in 2011. He donated $100,000 to American Crossroads in 2010. Childs also got involved in the contentious Wisconsin recall election, donating $100,000 to recalled Republican Gov. Scott Walker's campaign. He's been a major donor to Republican infrastructure, including the Republican National Committee, over the years.

Just prior to the 2002 Massachusetts gubernatorial election, in which Romney faced off against Democrat Shannon O'Brien, Childs provided half the funding for a radio ad supporting Romney, secretly giving $25,000 to a front group in violation of campaign finance law. He and his accomplice, Robert Maginn, were found out after the election and fined.

Child, who rarely grants interviews to the media, is also president of Ducks Unlimited's Wetlands America Trust.

The contributions documented in Conservative Transparency are based on a review of publicly available filings with the Internal Revenue Service and Federal Election Commission, as well as state-level data from a variety of sources. Please contact us for more information.
