Dear [redacted] --

LOYALTY IS WHAT MAKES GOOD CITIZENS

A community draws its strength from its members.

A country draws its strength from good citizenship.

The announcement last week by the Immigration Minister to fast track Canadian citizenship for refugees and migrants, while at the same time revoking the law that was brought in by our Conservative Government which removed Canadian citizenship from dual citizens convicted of terrorist acts asks the questions:

A Hero Forever In Our Hearts

Why do migrants need to be protected from losing newly granted Canadian citizenship if they are convicted of committing a terrorist act?

Why is it now necessary to shorten the waiting time to become a Canadian citizen?

Is the liberal party afraid of alienating tens of thousands of new voters with the threat of deportation if any are convicted of terrorist activity?

Is the decision to relax screening procedures, which may have allowed terrorists to sneak into Canada to commit atrocities against Canadians linked to the shorter waiting period?

The one threat that may have prevented a terrorist act, deportation, is now being removed.

The government plans to fast track citizenship for the tens of thousands of refugees and migrants it is airlifting into Canada in time for the next election.

If you agree with me, we do not want convicted terrorists living in Canada.

Canada should be carefully screening all applicants for citizenship.

Canadian citizenship is a privilege that should be taken away from anyone who does not respect our laws and our country.

Our country is being changed.

Changed in ways that knocks Canada down instead of building it up.
