CLERK OF COURTS

TO THE HONORABLE COURT:

MOTION TO CHANGE VENUE

AND NOW this 20th day of January, 2017, comes the above-named defendant, Trev Bowies Jackson, II, by and through his attorney, R. Davis Younts, Esquire and respectfully requests This Honorable Court grant a Change of Venue for trial in the above-captioned matter, and in support thereof avers the following:

Statement of Relevant Facts

1. On or about November 22, 2015, an alleged incident occurred leading to the above captioned charges being filed.

2. From November 22, 2015, through on or about June 15, 2016, a manhunt was conducted for the Defendant based on his alleged involvement in criminal activity.

3. On or about December 2, 2015, the Northern York Regional Police Department released dashboard camera footage of the incident, naming the Defendant as the "shooter" to local media outlets. (See Enclosure 1 – ABC27.com article regarding release of video footage).

4. Due to the nature of the allegations, the release of video footage, and the manhunt there has and continues to be significant media coverage of this case within and throughout York County. (See Enclosure 2 – printouts of internet search results for "Trev Jackson York Pa" and Enclosure 3 – printouts of internet search results for "police shooting York Pa").

5. On September 1, 2016, the Preliminary Hearing was held. Present at the Preliminary Hearing were representatives from major local media outlets including ABC 27 News, Fox 43 News, CBS 21 News, and others. (See Enclosure 4 – Sampling of news articles published after the preliminary hearing).

6. The dashcam video of the incident allegedly involving the Defendant is prominently posted on the internet web page you-tube which allows viewers to watch the video and be exposed to comments regarding the incident. (See Enclosure 5 – January 19, 2017 printout of you-tube search results for "Trev Jackson York Pa").

7. The media reporting related to this case has included the name of the Defendant, photographs, video footage of the alleged incident, and commentary on his criminal history. (See Enclosure 6 – News article detailing the Defendant as a felon and a person not to possess).

8. As demonstrated by Enclosures 2-3, news stories containing information related to the case as well as video footage alleging the Defendant was the shooter in video are still pervasively available online. (See Enclosures 2-3).

9. Rather than declining with the passage of time, media interest in this case has remained consistent and due to the nature of internet news articles, the news commentary, and coverage of this case remains available to potential jurors at the click of a button. (See Enclosures 2-4, 7).

Applicable Law

10. In accordance with Pennsylvania Rule for Criminal Procedure 584, a motion for a change of venue may be granted if the court determines after a hearing that a fair and impartial Trial cannot otherwise be had in the county where the case is currently pending.

11. The factors for determining whether a change of venue based on pretrial publicity should be granted are well established under Pennsylvania law. While the mere existence of pretrial publicity does not warrant a presumption of prejudice, if pretrial publicity occurred, its nature and effect on the community must be considered. According to the Court in Commonwealth v. Chambers, 546 Pa. 370, 386 (1996), factors to consider include whether the publicity was sensational, inflammatory, and slanted toward conviction rather than factual and objective; whether the publicity revealed the accused's prior criminal record, if any; whether it referred to confessions, admissions, or reenactments of the crime by the accused; and whether such information is the product of releases by the police or prosecuting officials. Pennsylvania Courts have found that if any of these factors exists, the publicity is considered inherently prejudicial. Once this conclusion is reached, inquiry must be made to determine if publicity was extensive, sustained, and pervasive to the point the community must be considered saturated with it. Even under such circumstances, change of venue may not be warranted if the passage of time has significantly dissipated the prejudicial effects of the publicity. Commonwealth v. Bomar, 573 Pa. 426, 471 (2003) (citations omitted) (citing Commonwealth v. Chambers, 546 Pa. 370, 386 (1996)).

12. In Commonwealth v. Pierce, 451 Pa. 190 (1973), the Pennsylvania Supreme Court found that pre-trial publicity was so pervasive that it required a change of venue. "While much of the publicity was routine, factual, and wholly lacking inflammatory content, a great deal of publicity about Pierce was emotionally charged and inflammatory, and clearly pointed to his guilt." Commonwealth v. Frazier, 471 Pa. 121, 127 (1977) (quoting Pierce) (emphasis added in Frazier).

Argument

13. Given the time that has passed since the incident and giving rise to the charges and other critical procedural steps in this case, including the Preliminary Hearing, this Honorable Court is now in a reasonable position to evaluate the pre-trial publicity in this case. Upon review of pre-trial publicity, it is clear much of the pre-trial publicity has been inherently prejudicial, that coverage has been pervasive, and that the passage of time has not eliminated the pervasive nature of the coverage.

14. As in Pierce and Frazier, the media coverage in this case, including a dashcam video released by the Northern York Regional Police Department, has been emotionally charged, inflammatory, and identified the Defendant as a Felon. The officially released dashcam footage reveals potential evidence in the case and the video has been posted and reposted on publicly available and pervasively used internet sites, such as you-tube. (See Enclosures 1 and 5). News coverage after the preliminary hearing has included emotionally charged headlines such as "Officer says he heard gunshot, felt powder burn on his face..." (See Enclosure 4). News articles that remain readily available online indicate the Defendant is a felon and a person not to possess. (See e.g. Enclosures 6 and 7). Because the pre-trial publicity, including a video released by the police, has resulted in extensive media coverage and media coverage has been emotionally charged, and included aspects of the Defendant's criminal history, the Defendant has met the burden of establishing that the publicity has been inherently prejudicial. See Commonwealth v. Bomar, 573 Pa. 426 (2003) and Commonwealth v. Chambers, 546 Pa. 370 (1996).

15. Having met the burden of establishing the prejudicial nature of the pre-trial publicity in this case, the Defendant avers that the nature and extent of the news media coverage in this case has been sufficiently pervasive and continuous. For more than a year, multiple large media outlets in the York Community have covered this case and provided a forum for the police to disseminate information regarding the case, including a video allegedly containing criminal activity. Coverage has included, television, print, and internet circulation throughout all phases of the case. (See Enclosure 4). The passage of time has not alleviated the potential prejudice because multiple stories and videos related to this case are available publicly online (See Enclosures 2,3 and 5). In addition to being publicly available for viewing on line, the stories and videos may be commented on by readers causing the content to be refreshed and increasing the possibility for inflammatory and prejudicial commentary. (See Enclosure 7).

Conclusion

16. Consistent coverage by all significant media outlets in a community under circumstances where video footage released by the local police remains available and easily accessible for review and commentary has made it impossible for the Defendant to receive a fair trial untainted by prejudicial pre-trial publicity in York County.

WHEREFORE, for the above stated reasons Defendant prays This Honorable Court GRANT his motion and proceed with necessary judicial actions to initiate a change of venue.

Trev Bowies Jackson, 24, is wanted on charges including attempted homicide and aggravated assault. (Northern York County Regional Police Department)

YORK, Pa. (WHTM) – Northern York County Regional Police released dash-cam video of a police-involved shooting last week in an attempt to capture the suspect.

Police said on November 22, Trev Jackson tried to kill Officer Lynn Anderson during a traffic stop at the Manchester Crossroads Shopping Center. Anderson pulled Jackson over on suspicion of drunk driving and detecting an odor of marijuana coming from the car, police said.

In the video, Jackson can be seen firing at Anderson several times. Anderson was not hit.

Jackson is to be considered armed and "extremely dangerous," according to police. He may have a wounded left hand.

Northern York County Regional Police Department held a news conference Wednesday morning briefing the latest in the investigation.

Chief Mark Bentzel says investigators have been in contact with Jackson's family, however the search remains ongoing.

Pa. Crimestoppers is offering a $5,000 cash reward for a tip that leads to Jackson's arrest. To leave a tip you can call 1-800-4-PA-TIPS. You may also report any sightings or information to 9-1-1 or 717-292-3647.

Officer says he heard gunshot, felt powder burn his face during York County traffic stop

By Steve Marroni | smarroni@pennlive.com

MANCHESTER TOWNSHIP - On what started off as a typical night patrolling northern York County, Officer Lynn Anderson spotted a blue Buick that was moving between lanes, without using a turn signal, on Arsenal Road.

Anderson pulled over the driver and what he testified on Thursday happened next happened very quickly.

"I heard a loud gunshot go past my ear," the officer said.

He didn't actually see the gun, but he was close enough to feel the powder burn his face.

As Anderson rolled for cover, two more shots went off, he said, and the driver of the Buick jumped back in his car and sped away.

Police say the driver was Trev Bowies Jackson, 24, of Philadelphia.

Jackson's face was plastered all over the news and on highway electronic billboards before he was arrested in April - five months later.

A preliminary hearing was held on Thursday, and charges that include criminal attempt at homicide, assault of a law enforcement officer, recklessly endangering another person and burglary were all bound over to York County Court, where he is set for arraignment on Oct. 7.

Anderson told the court that when he pulled Jackson over in the Crossroads Shopping Center on Nov. 2, he asked him to step out of his car.

Jackson did, but when he handed the officer his drivers' license, he dropped it on the ground.

The officer said he then told Jackson, twice, to put his arms behind his back. As Anderson put away his light to grab his handcuffs, he saw Jackson move to his left.

That's when he said Jackson shot at him three times.

"I ducked and rolled behind the Buick," Anderson testified.

He said Jackson then got into his car and sped away. Anderson fired at the fleeing Buick seven times, shattering at least one of the car's windows, before it got away.

Jackson, however, left behind his driver's license.

Several hours later, Jennifer Storm, who lives nearby, went outside to her garage. She heard crunching leaves, and then heard the latch of her gate opening.

She turned and she testified that she saw a man in a hoodie holding her son's bicycle.

She called the police, and Northern York County Regional Police Detective Bill Haller, realizing Storm lived near the site of the shooting, began investigating.

His suspicions that the bike thief could be Jackson were further raised when he found a pool of blood inside the shed and on the leaves outside, he said.

Investigators soon found the bike at the York apartment belonging to Jackson's girlfriend, according to testimony.

During the hearing, there was no mention of the search for Jackson, and afterwards, Senior Deputy Prosecutor David Sunday said he would not comment at this point on what prosecutors believe Jackson was doing during that time.

But on the accusation alone of assaulting a police officer with a firearm, Sunday said, Jackson faces a mandatory sentence of 20 to 40 years in state prison if convicted.

And it's an incident like this, which was captured on dash cam video, that highlights what a dangerous job police officers have, Sunday said.

"Incidents like this show that every single day that a police officer is working, they can come into contact with something that can end their life," he said. "This was a mundane traffic stop that resulted in gunshots."

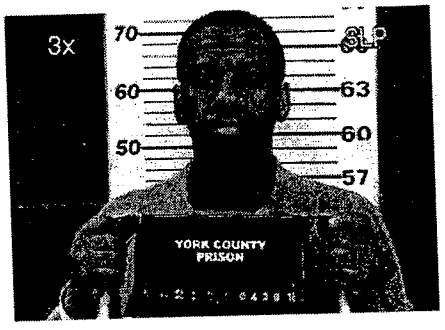
Man accused of shooting at police officer in York County will go to trial

POSTED 11:21 AM, SEPTEMBER 1, 2016, BY JENNIFER READY



MANCHESTER TWP., Pa.,- The man charged for allegedly shooting a Northern York County Regional Police officer will face trial for several charges including assault of a law enforcement officer and criminal attempt criminal homicide.

Trev Jackson appeared in court on Thursday morning for his preliminary hearing before Judge Jeffrey Oberdorf. According to prosecutors, on November 22, 2015, Jackson fired multiple shots at Northern York County Regional Police officer, Lynn Anderson, after Anderson stopped Jackson for swerving in and out of traffic and failing to use turning signals.

Jackson was arrested in Philadelphia earlier this year after being on the run for nearly five months.

In court, Officer Anderson did testify. Anderson said he suffered gun powder burns on his face.

An arraignment is scheduled for October 7th.

YORK, Pa. (WHTM) – A man jailed for shooting at a police officer in Manchester Township last year is headed to trial on attempted homicide and related charges.

All charges against 25-year-old Trev B. Jackson were held for court after a preliminary hearing on Thursday.

Jackson on Nov. 22 was stopped in the parking lot of the Crossroads Shopping Center for suspected DUI when he allegedly shot at Northern York County Regional police Officer Ryan Anderson.

Watch Live: ABC27 News Daybreak

Anderson suspected he smelled burning marijuana and asked Jackson to step out of the car. Police say Jackson pulled a handgun from his waist and fired three rounds.

Anderson returned fire as Jackson fled. The officer was not injured by the gunfire.

Jackson was arrested in April after five months on the run. He's in York County Prison without bail.

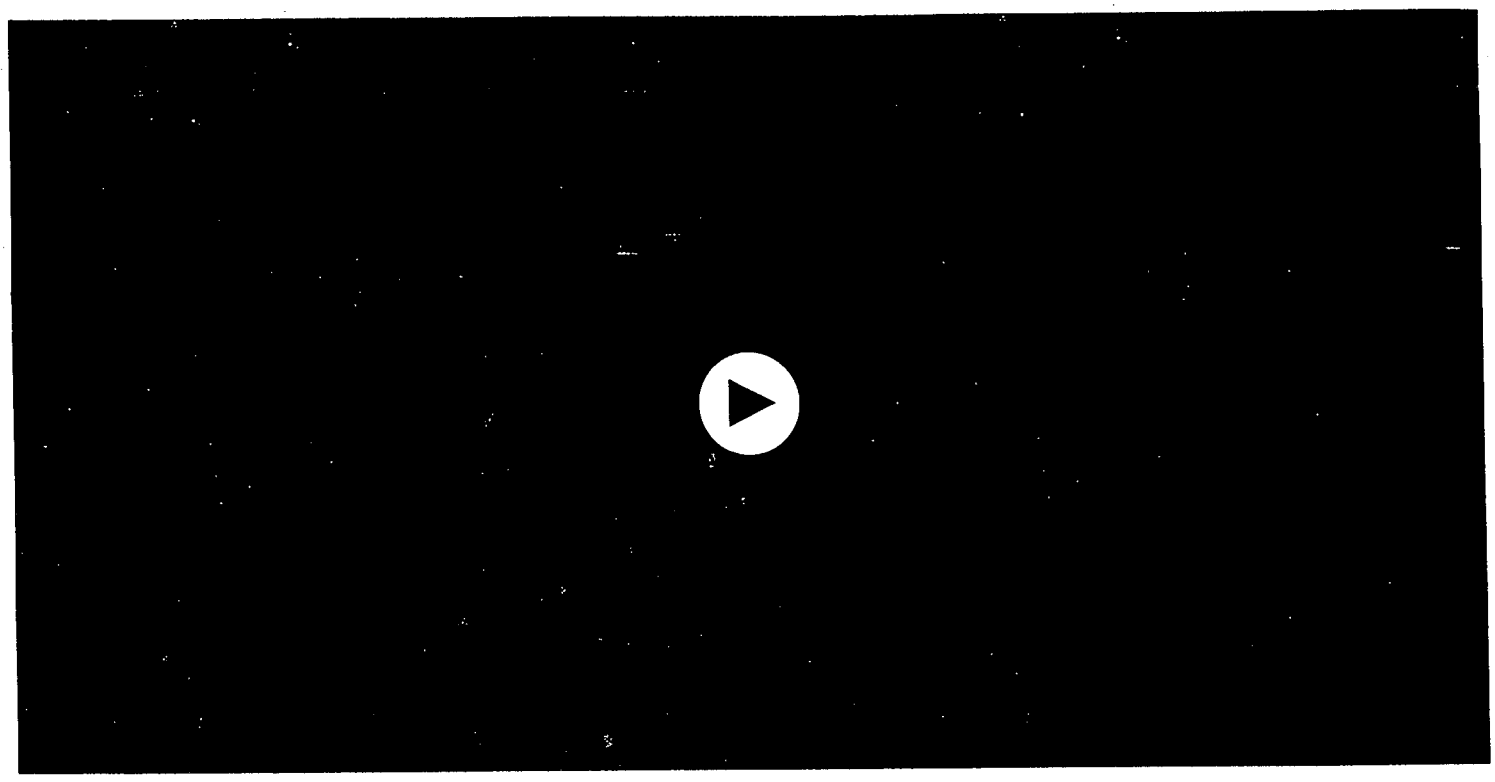
Man accused of shooting at police officer moves closer to trial

by CBS 21 Web Staff
Thursday, September 1st 2016



All charges against 25-year-old Trev Jackson were held for court on Thursday. He's accused of criminal attempted homicide, aggravated assault and recklessly endangering another person, prosecutors said, for shooting at York County police officer last November.

MANCHESTER TOWNSHIP, Pa. — The man police say tried to kill a police officer by shooting at him when the officer tried to conduct a traffic stop has moved closer to trial following a hearing Thursday morning in York County.

All charges against 25-year-old Trev Jackson were held for court by Magisterial District Judge Jeffrey Oberdorf.

Jackson faces several charges, including criminal attempted homicide, aggravated assault and recklessly endangering another person, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors say Jackson shot at Northern York County Regional police Officer Lynn Anderson on Nov. 22, 2015, after Anderson pulled Jackson over in a Manchester Township shopping plaza. Investigators say Jackson tried to shoot Anderson when the officer tried to take him into custody.

Jackson pulled a handgun from his waistband and fired fired three rounds at Anderson and drove away from the area, police said. Anderson returned fire, and wasn't hurt during the incident.

A several month manhunt took place for Jackson, with him being located in Philadelphia and arrested on April 29.

On Thursday, Anderson testified at the preliminary hearing saying the traffic stop was normal and he pulled Jackson over for seeing his vehicle swerve twice into another lane.

Anderson testified Jackson was complying with the traffic stop, but the only thing that was odd was his vehicle's windows were tinted and wouldn't go down. That is why, Anderson said, he asked Jackson to get out of the vehicle.

As Jackson got out of the vehicle, Anderson testified he got a feeling Jackson might run, so he started to get closer to Jackson.

Anderson said he was "inches away from Jackson" when he heard the pop of the gun Jackson pulled, and was even burned by the gun powder discharge.

Anderson said Jackson fired two more shots at him as he was retreating. Anderson he returned fire seven times toward Jackson's vehicle as it sped away.

"Incidents like this show that every single day a police officer is working, they could come in contact with something that could end their life. This was a mundane traffic stop that resulted in gunshots," York County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Dave Sunday said.

The entire incident was recorded by Anderson's patrol vehicle's dashcam, but the video wasn't shown in court, despite being previously released by the police department shortly after the incident.

Jackson's defense said they may pursue a change of venue for the trial or to bring an outside jury in because of the press coverage and the already-released dashcam video, which could have allowed potential biases to already be formed by prospective jurors.

"My focus at this point is really on the facts that the video is out there. What we don't want is people seeing that video and making a determination about the case before they have had all of the evidence in front of them," defense attorney Davis Younts said.

A second preliminary hearing was also held for Jackson related to theft and prowling a night charges.

Police allege Jackson broke into a shed nearby where the shooting occurred and stole a bicycle he used to get away.

Investigators found blood inside and outside of the shed, which they say belongs to Jackson. All charge against Jackson in relation to those counts were also held for trial.

Police also arrested three people for allegedly helping Jackson after the incident (http://local21news.com/arrests-made-in-case-of-man-who-shot-at-officer-police-say).

Cristina Lissette Perez, Xeomarie Velez-Quinones and Cathillia Laureano were all arrested March 4 in connection to the case.

Laureano is accused of bandaging Jackson's wounds, providing him with clothing, and arranging a ride for Jackson with Velez-Quinones.

Trial ahead for 2 women accused of helping Trev Jackson II evade capture

Two of three women accused of helping alleged would-be cop killer Trev Bowies Jackson II evade capture are now facing trial, and one of them is being released from prison.

Jackson, 24, formerly of the 100 block of East College Avenue, remains a fugitive on the charges of attempted homicide, aggravated assault on a police officer and reckless endangerment. He is a convicted felon who isn't allowed to possess firearms.

Anyone with information about his whereabouts is urged to call 911 immediately. Police said he should be considered armed and dangerous.

Jackson is accused of firing a pistol three times directly at the face of Northern York County Regional Police Officer Lynn Anderson during a 10 p.m. Nov. 22 traffic stop along Route 30 in Manchester Township.

Anderson dove out of the way and avoided being shot, then returned fire and wounded Jackson in the left hand as Jackson fled in a vehicle, police have said.

Jackson's on-again/off-again girlfriend, Cathilia Laureano, appeared Thursday before Emigsville-area District Judge Jeffrey Oberdorf and waived her right to a preliminary hearing.

In exchange for her waiver, senior deputy prosecutor Kelley Nelson requested a bail modification for Laureano to unsecured supervised bail, meaning Laureano wouldn't have to post any money to be released. Nelson said the woman has no prior criminal record.

"She has two children," public defender Catherine Himes told Oberdorf.

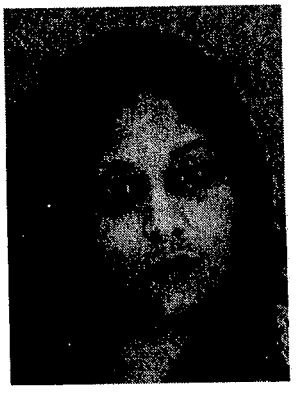
Judge 'reluctant': Oberdorf granted the request, changing Laureano's $100,000 bail to $100,000 unsecured bail, meaning she could forfeit that amount if she misses court hearings. The judge ordered Laureano be supervised by probation officers while free on bail, and said he was only willing to make the change because the prosecution requested it.

"You helped someone who allegedly tried to kill a police officer," and who could try to kill another officer, Oberdorf told her. "I'm reluctant to do this."

"Thank you, I appreciate it," Laureano replied. She was expected to be released from York County Prison Thursday evening, a prison official said.

Her apparent aunt, Xeomarie Velez-Quinones, chose to have her preliminary hearing Thursday morning. After listening to testimony, Oberdorf determined enough evidence exists for her to stand trial in York County Court.

Velez-Quinones, 33, of 428 W. Philadelphia St., first floor, remains in county prison on $100,000 bail, charged with two counts of hindering the apprehension of a suspect.



Laureano, 23, of 337 W. Market St., Apt. 4D, is charged with four counts of hindering the apprehension of a suspect.

'Had to know': The two women might not have known that Jackson allegedly shot at a police officer at point-blank range, but the fact that he showed up at Laureano's home with a gunshot wound to his hand and was reticent to say how it happened should have made them suspicious, Oberdorf said.

"They had to know there was criminal activity going on," he said.

Oberdorf acknowledged that both women allegedly lied repeatedly to a deputy U.S. marshal searching for Jackson and only told the truth about being with Jackson after learning there was evidence he'd been with them — and that they could be charged with felonies for lying to police.

When Velez-Quinones' defense attorney, Wayne Gracey, argued his client and Laureano eventually told the truth, Oberdorf wasn't impressed.

The judge likened it to running a stop sign, seeing a police officer, then backing up and stopping for the stop sign.

Testimony: Nelson called just one witness for Velez-Quinones' preliminary hearing — Deputy U.S. Marshal Philip R. Lewis III.

Lewis testified he and other members of the U.S. Marshals Service Fugitive Task Force went to Laureano's apartment on Nov. 23, hours after the shooting incident, and spotted a bloody white BMX bicycle in the lobby of her apartment building. The bike matched the description of a bicycle stolen from a Manchester Township shed, allegedly by Jackson, Lewis said.

The task force members found blood on the doorknob of Laureano's apartment door as well. They forced entry inside, but "the place was empty," Lewis said.

Inside, they found an open bag of Jackson's bloody clothes in the bathroom along with a bottle of peroxide, according to Lewis.

Surveillance video and information from a neighbor led the task force to Velez-Quinones' apartment, where they found her and a crying Laureano, he said.

'Came clean': Laureano eventually admitted Jackson showed up at her door injured and that she cleaned his wound, wrapped it in a pair of tights and called Velez-Quinones in a panic, according to Lewis. Defense attorney Gracey said Velez-Quinones is Laureano's aunt.

Velez-Quinones eventually admitted she drove to Laureano's home, picked up Laureano and Jackson, and drove them back to her home, Lewis testified. She said after pulling up, Jackson got out of the car and kept going, that he didn't go inside her apartment that day, the deputy marshal said.

He also testified the women indicated Jackson didn't tell them how he got shot.

Lewis said he told the women, "Just tell the truth; you won't get in trouble," but that the women lied for at least a half-hour before they "came clean."

The third woman charged with hindering the apprehension of Jackson is Cristina Perez, 23, of 223 Park St. in York City. Oberdorf forwarded her case to York County Court for trial following her March 31 preliminary hearing.

Funny. They don't mention that he was on state paroie You know, what the Secretary of Corrections likes to call a "reentrant." It seems this "reentrant" didn't do so well. Keep in mind he purposely dropped his license on the ground hoping the officer would bend over to pick it up so he could pop him in the head. Nice guy.

I got news for you folks, if your a drug dealer, your probably violent as well, the business itself is inherently violent.

This example of violence against the police illustrates just how wrong and evil is Colin Kaepernick's anti-police rhetoric and action. Mr.Kaepernick does not deserve to be a member of a National Football League club.
