Dinuba Unified in Discussions with ACLU and Clients

Dinuba, California –Dinuba Unified just received a copy of the complaint but we have not had an opportunity to review it. To honor our good faith effort to work with the ACLU and their clients, we will not comment on their allegations or legal arguments at this time.

We always want to work with anyone concerned about how we can provide the best education possible for our children so we extended an invitation to talk with them even before the lawsuit was filed, and again today. We had a productive conversation today and the parties have agreed to work together in good faith to avoid costly and excessive litigation. We will not comment on the substance of the conversation except to say we are talking, and that is a good start.

We always take any concerns about the education of our students very seriously, whether expressed in a lawsuit or when raised by parents or teachers. Again, to honor our good faith effort to work with the ACLU and their clients, we will not comment on their allegations or legal arguments at this time.
