I wanted to take a moment to share some amazing information!

As the Athletic Administrator for Deering High School in Portland, Maine, it is my responsibility to ensure that my student-athletes have the best medical team in place for their care. In my time here at Deering, I am beyond pleased at the medical team we have put together for our kids. Deering Athletics is proud to partner with Greg Tosi LATC, Dr. John Colianni, MD and Wendy Richards, DPT. I am confident that our student-athletes are receiving the best care not only in prevention and treatment but rehabilitation as well. Many of our student-athletes have utilized these medical services and report not only outstanding results, but also report positive and enjoyable relationships with the care team while undergoing treatment.

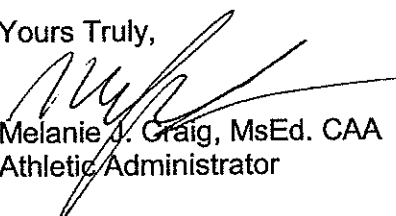

Recently, I was fortunate enough to experience first-hand what my athletes have reported to me. When the need arose for me to personally participate in physical therapy, I chose Port City Physical Therapy. It was important for me to have the same care that my student-athletes have in order to evaluate the medical team we have in place. All I can say is that Wendy, Gary and the staff at Port City Physical Therapy exceeded my expectations, both personally and professionally!

What an amazing team! While participating in my own rehabilitation, I observed Wendy and Gary working with children, teenage student-athletes, elderly individuals, as well as our non-English speaking population. I could not have been more impressed with the hands on, personalized service they gave each and every patient. They were able to adapt quickly to each patient and their individual needs. What impressed me the most was the level of compassion, the warm, welcoming environment and honestly, their success level at healing such a diversified clientele.

During such a time in the age of health care, I am proud and thankful that places such as Port City Physical Therapy exist. I know that every one of my students is treated the same way regardless of background, socio economics, etc. and that they will each receive top notch health care.

Thank you Port City Physical Therapy!

Yours Truly,
