ISAAC NEWTON COLLECTION

Mr. Frederick E. Brasch, Chief of Scientific Collection, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., presented to the University Libraries a valuable collection of Isaac Newton's works.

PAINTINGS

Miss Carlotta Mabury presented as a gift in memory of Eugenia M. Fosbery two oil paintings, "Glory of Venice," by Frank Brangwyn, and "Spirit of the Woods," by William Keith. These are placed in the Stanford Art Gallery.

Dr. Josef Sigall painted a portrait of Chancellor Ray Lyman Wilbur and presented it to the University. This portrait is now placed in the Hoover Library on War, Revolution, and Peace.

STUDIES IN THE PROBLEMS OF LASTING PEACE

The President of the University and the Directors of the Hoover Library were authorized to establish a fund for research, publication, and dissemination of information on the Problems of Lasting Peace. This fund has been made possible through gifts to the Hoover Library on War, Revolution, and Peace from the American Children's Fund, which are to be expended under the direction of Mr. Herbert Hoover.

FELLOWSHIPS

ABBOTT LABORATORIES FELLOWSHIP

In 1942 the University received from the Abbott Laboratories the sum of $650 to establish a fellowship in inorganic chemistry for the year 1942-43, the appointment to be made by the Executive Head of the Department of Chemistry.

MELVILLE J. JACOBY FUND

The University received $1,602 from the family and friends of Melville Jacoby to establish a memorial fund which will provide the Melville J. Jacoby Essay Prize and the Melville J. Jacoby Fellowship or Fellowships. Mr. Jacoby received the Bachelor of Arts degree (1938) and the Master of Arts degree (1939) in Social Sciences-Journalism from Stanford University. He was head of Time magazine's Far Eastern Bureau in Manila at the time of the Japanese attack and did outstanding work as a war correspondent. He was killed by an airplane in Australia, April 29, 1942.

The instrument provides that the income from the fund shall be used to establish a fellowship or fellowships for worthy students, the amount of such fellowship or fellowships and the selection of the beneficiaries to be determined by the Executive Head of the Division of Journalism. Until the fund yields an annual income of $100 per year, at least $50 and not more than $100 of the income is to be used for an annual prize for an essay relating to a political, social, or economic subject on the Orient. After the fund yields an annual income in excess of $100, any amount over $50 is to be accumulated into a fund to be known as "The Melville J. Jacoby Fellowship Fund," and the $50 annual income remaining is to be used annually for "The Melville J. Jacoby Essay Prize." Whenever the accumulation amounts to not more than $350, a Melville J. Jacoby Fellowship is to be offered to a deserving student in the Division of Journalism. This fellowship to and including September 1, 1950, is to concern itself primarily with the study of social, economic, and political problems of the Orient, and thereafter the fellowship is to concern itself preferably with the social, economic, and political problems of the Orient.

If after twenty-five years from June 1, 1942, the income from the fund is no longer useful for the purposes stated, provision is made that the Board of Trustees may use the income for such other purposes as in its opinion will best promote the objects and welfare of the University; provided, however, that if at the end of ten years the annual income from the fund is less than $50, the Board of Trustees may use the income from the fund for such other purposes as in its opinion will best promote the objects and welfare of the University at the end of the ten-year period.

NUTRITION FOUNDATION FELLOWSHIPS

In 1942 the University received from the Nutrition Foundation, Inc., the amount of $6,000 to establish four fellowships for the year 1942-43, with the expectation of continuing these during 1943-44. These fellowships are for the purpose of developing bio-assays for vitamins, amino acids, and other factors of importance in nutrition.

SCHOLARSHIPS

THE GEORGE PORTER BALDWIN FOUNDATION

In 1941, the University received the sum of $25,000 under the will of Mrs. Florence E. Baldwin, to endow the George Porter Baldwin Foundation in memory of her husband, the income to be used in providing scholarships and/or assisting worthy and needy students, preferably in the School of Engineering. Mr. Baldwin serials issued in Latin America; important periodical and newspaper files of German and Austrian emigré groups and exiled political parties, issued outside the National Socialist German Reich; and additions to the Nathan van Patten Collection on the Chino-Japanese Conflict.

Mr. Ray C. Wakefield, of Washington, D.C., documents dealing with radio communication.

Professor J. T. Watkins, of Columbus, Ohio, press releases, reports, and bulletins issued in the United States and Great Britain concerning the present war.

Professor Clifford Weigle, of Stanford University, his "The Press in Paris from 1920 to 1940," reprinted from Journalism Quarterly, Vol. 18, No. 4, December 1941.

Mr. Kendall Weisiger, of Atlanta, Georgia, through Professor E. K. Strong, of Stanford University, a collection of publications issued in the United States on postwar planning, together with letters and addresses of Mr. Weisiger on the same subject.

The Honorable Burton K. Wheeler, of Washington, D.C., speeches made by Senator Wheeler during the period of our neutrality in the present war.

Professor Lynn T. White, of Stanford University, four books published by the German Library of Information, New York, 1940.

Professor Bailey Willis, of Stanford University, manuscripts, books, pamphlets, and files of serial publications issued in the United States and other countries concerning the present war.

Miss Maud J. Wilson, of Palo Alto, a photographic portrait of Dr. David Starr Jordan, and books dealing with the World War, 1914-1918.

Mr. Louis D. Wine of San Jose, California, issues of Radio Tokyo for September and October, 1941.

Miss L. G. Woods, of San Francisco, California, Songs of the United States and Her Allies, 32 p.

World Affairs Group, Palo Alto, California, through Professor H. H. Fisher, of Stanford University, files and records of the meetings of the World Affairs Group which for a number of years had meetings at the home of Mrs. David Starr Jordan, but now discontinued. These records are to be part of the David Starr Jordan Collection.

Mrs. Ada F. Wyman, of Palo Alto, California, miscellaneous numbers of five periodicals covering the period 1936 to date.

Miss Mary Yost, of Stanford University, materials on the present war issued in the United States, and additions to her contributions to propaganda distributed in the United States previous to its entry into the present world struggle.

grants-in-aid programs. A third of his time was spent in Washington as an expert consultant in the War Department. He was granted a leave for 1942-43 to continue in a similar capacity with the Council and with the War Department. Two of Dr. McNemar's publications during the year—a book on the revision of the Stanford-Binet Scale and a group test of intelligence (the latter with Professor Terman as co-author)—represent the culmination of several years of research activity.

Dr. Ross, as lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve, was engaged in psychological service in connection with ground schools for pilot training.

Dr. Magaret was on duty at the University during the autumn, winter, spring, and summer quarters, teaching regular courses in the department and handling the Independent Study program. She attended the meetings of the American Psychological Association at Northwestern University in September, and the meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Dallas in December. Before Section I of the latter association she gave a research paper, "A Comparative Study of the Performance of Normal, Paretic, and Schizophrenic Adults on the Wechsler-Bellevue Intelligence Scale," and participated in a symposium on "Recent Advances in the Appraisal of Personality." In December she took part in a symposium on "The Problem Child" at a public meeting of the California Mental Hygiene Society in San Francisco.

LEWIS MADISON TERMAN

Executive Head

DIVISION OF JOURNALISM

The staff consisted of Chilton R. Bush, professor; Clifford F. Weigle, assistant professor; Thomas M. Newell, acting instructor (spring and summer); Truman Robert Letts and Darwin L. Teilhet (autumn), James C. Nute and Herbert K. Reynolds (winter), and Edward J. Demson (spring), lecturers.

Class enrolment, exclusive of practice courses, was 409; this was a decline of 11 per cent. The number of major students was 56. The Bachelor of Arts degree was granted to 23 and the Master's degree to one.

Only one man in the graduating class was not subject to military service. Places in journalism for women graduates became available long before graduation time arrived, and many more were requested than were available.

Recent graduates have made enviable records as war correspondents, and a considerable proportion of each recent class of men is serving as officers in the intelligence and public relations sections of the services. Others are in the government wartime information services, the Office of Price Administration, the Service of Supply, and similar sections of the war effort.

To assist students to accelerate their college programs, the division doubled its offerings in summer quarter, and enrolled 74 per cent of the 1942-43 graduating class.

The division sponsored the eighteenth annual convention of the Central California Scholastic Press Association in October, and (with the California Newspaper Publishers' Association) the fifth Midyear Editors' Conference in June.

Mr. Bush retired in December as chairman of the National Council on Research and was elected president of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism. He retired in October as national vice-president of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism society. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the School of Social Sciences, the Committee on Athletics (Men), the special Committee on Teacher Training, a special committee of Stanford Associates on Public Relations, and was chairman of the Publications Committee of the Alumni Association.

He conducted a measurement of newspaper circulations in Los Angeles County and, with Mr. Weigle, conducted a reader-interest survey for the Redwood City Tribune. In September he was in Honolulu to establish a method of measuring institutional advertising and public opinion for two corporations. In the summer he was consultant in surveys conducted by three public utilities in Washington and Oregon, and acted as consultant in public-opinion analysis for the regional office of the Office of Price Administration. He addressed the San Francisco Advertising Club, the American Council on Public Relations in San Francisco and Los Angeles, the annual meeting of Sigma Delta Chi in Portland, and a section of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism convention on research methodology. He was director of publicity in the autumn, winter, and spring quarters.

Mr. Weigle was director of publicity in the summer quarter and served on the Student Affairs and Radio committees. He addressed the convention of the Central California Scholastic Press Association and the Midyear Editors' Conference. He was adviser to the Stanford chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising society.

Mr. Newell, who joined the staff in the spring, was appointed instructor for the next academic year. During the summer he supervised a reader-interest investigation for the British Library of Information.
