1 I INTRODUCTION

2 On January 28, 1997, the Court approved a class-wide settlement of this action.
3 Exhibit 80, Plaintiffs’ Exhibits, filed herewith (“PX”), at 556 (“Settlement”). The 4 agreement sets standards for the detention and release of juveniles detained for 5 alleged civil violations of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. §§ 1101 et
6 *seq.*¹ The Settlement binds successors to the Immigration and Naturalization Service
7 (“INS”), including Department of Health and Human Services’ Office of Refugee 8 Resettlement (“ORR”), which since 2002 has been responsible for the custody and 9 release of unaccompanied class members.²

10 The Settlement requires ORR to minimize the detention of children and,
11 thereby, the harm detention causes them. In the William Wilberforce Trafficking
12 Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, 110 Pub. L. 457, 122 Stat. 5044, 13 codified in pertinent part at 8 U.S.C. § 1232 (“TVPRA”), Congress incorporated this 14 bedrock principle into federal law.

15 ORR has nonetheless adopted certain policies and practices that prolong 16 children’s detention under ever-harsher conditions, creating a continuum of trauma
17 that class members—many of whom arrive in the United States having suffered 18 horrific abuse abroad—are ill-equipped to endure.

21 ¹ The Settlement covers “all minors who are detained in the legal custody of the INS,” 22 and binds the INS and Department of Justice, as well as “their agents, employees, 23 contractors, and/or successors in office.” Settlement ¶ 1. The Settlement is binding 24 until “45 days following defendants’ publication of final regulations implementing 25 this Agreement.” Exhibit 3, Plaintiffs’ First Set of Exhibits, etc., Feb. 2, 2015 (Dkt.
26 101), at 54. Defendants have never published such regulations.

27 ² In 2002, the Homeland Security Act, Pub. L. 107-296, 116 Stat. 2135 (“HSA”), 28 dissolved the INS and transferred most of its functions to the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”). Congress directed, however, that the ORR should have authority over unaccompanied minors detained pursuant to the INA. 6 U.S.C § 279.
The HSA included savings provisions that continue the Settlement in effect as to the INS’s successor agencies. HSA §§ 462(f)(2), 1512(a)(1).

1 First, ORR “steps up” youth from shelters to medium-secure, secure, and 2 psychiatric facilities without the most rudimentary procedural fairness or 3 transparency. Youth housed in shelters report being awakened in the small hours of 4 the morning and soon thereafter finding themselves confined in juvenile halls or 5 psychiatric facilities. ORR allows youth no administrative procedure—no interview, 6 hearing or administrative appeal—by which they may defend themselves against 7 needless step-up.

8 Second, ORR routinely administers children psychotropic drugs without lawful 9 authorization. When youth object to taking such medications, ORR compels them.
10 ORR neither requires nor asks for a parent’s consent before medicating a child, nor 11 does it seek lawful authority to consent in parents’ stead. Instead, ORR or facility
12 staff sign “consent” forms anointing themselves with “authority” to administer 13 psychotropic drugs to confined children.

14 Finally, the above practices—unlawful in and of themselves—work a further 15 injustice: once ORR steps up a class member, winning release to available custodians 16 becomes exponentially more difficult, and prolonged detention all but certain.
17 According to ORR policy, children who have ever been in a staff-secure or secure 18 facility remain detained until ORR’s director or his designee consents to release; such 19 consent is typically many weeks in coming, if it comes at all, and is required even 20 when the step-up was based on “inaccurate, or erroneous information.”

21 Once ORR steps up a youth to a residential treatment center (“RTC”), an RTC
22 doctor must authorize release. In effect, ORR’s summarily dispatching a child to a 23 psychiatric facility converts immigration-related custody into indefinite civil 24 commitment, and ORR does so without affording youth the most rudimentary 25 procedural protection.

26 Such a continuum of trauma would not be inflicted today on any other 27 population. But ORR detains immigrant and refugee children and freely exalts its 28

1 own administrative convenience to deny basic protections the Settlement confers. It
2 falls to this Court to remedy a palpable injustice.

3 II THE COURT MAY AND SHOULD PRESCRIBE PROCEDURAL REMEDIES TO 4 PROTECT THE SETTLEMENT’S SUBSTANTIVE PROVISIONS.

5 This Court has affirmed its jurisdiction to enforce the Settlement and set out
6 the principles for doing so. Order re: Plaintiffs’ Motion to Enforce Settlement, July 7 24, 2015 (Dkt. 177), at 3 (“24A Order”). Those principles remain apposite and need 8 not be repeated here.

9 As concerns remedy, the Court has “‘inherent power to enforce consent
10 judgments, beyond the remedial contractual terms agreed upon by the parties 11 [because] a consent judgment contemplates judicial interests apart from those of the 12 litigants.’” United States v. N.Y.C. Dist. Council of N.Y.C., 229 Fed. Appx. 14, at *18, 13 181 L.R.R.M. 3105 (2d Cir. 2007). “Until the parties have ‘fulfilled their express 14 obligations’ to comply with a consent decree, ‘the court has continuing authority and 15 discretion—pursuant to its independent, juridical interests—to ensure compliance.’”
16 Id. at *18 n.5 (internal citation omitted, alteration in original); United States v. Volvo
17 Powertrain Corp., 758 F.3d 330, 343 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (“Where, as here, a consent 18 decree ‘does not specify the consequences of a breach,’ the district court has 19 ‘equitable discretion’ to fashion a remedy for violations of the decree.”) (internal 20 citations omitted).

21 In Stone v. City & County of San Francisco, 968 F.2d 850, 861 & n.20 (9th 22 Cir. 1992), the Ninth Circuit held that a federal court’s authority to remedy violations 23 of a consent decree are the same as when constitutional violations occur. The 24 Supreme Court, of course, has often prescribed procedures, independently of the Due 25 Process Clause, to protect constitutional rights. E.g., Gerstein v. Pugh, 420 U.S. 103, 26 112, 95 S. Ct. 854, 43 L.Ed.2d 54 (1975) (“To implement the Fourth Amendment’s 27 protection against unfounded invasions of liberty and privacy,” magistrate must 28 review probable cause for arrest) (emphasis in original); Miranda v. Arizona, 384

1 U.S. 436, 478-79 (1966) (when detained individual is subjected to police questioning,
2 “the privilege against self-incrimination is jeopardized [and] [p]rocedural safeguards
3 must be employed to protect the privilege.”).

4 This Court may accordingly prescribe procedures in furtherance of the 5 Settlement’s substantive standards. E.g., EEOC v. Local 580, Int’l Ass’n of Bridge,
6 Structural & Ornamental Ironworkers, 925 F.2d 588, 592 (2d Cir. 1991) (affirming 7 “creation of backpay hearings” to further compliance with consent decree).

8 Constitutional principles of due process are in accord. Because the Government
9 voluntarily entered into the Settlement, the substantive rights it provides are “state-10 created.” Smith v. Sumner, 994 F.2d 1401, 1406 (9th Cir. 1993). ORR may not, 11 therefore, deny class members those rights without due process. *Id.*³ Each of the 12 remedies Plaintiffs seek is justified under the familiar test for determining what 13 process is due. See Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319 (1976).

14 The Court should enter a remedial order in the form proposed herewith.

15 III ORR UNLAWFULLY DENIES CLASS MEMBERS LICENSED PLACEMENTS.

16 A Youth have a compelling interest in licensed placement.

17 Settlement ¶ 19 requires ORR to place the general population of class members 18 in non-secure facilities licensed to care for dependent, as opposed to delinquent, 19 minors. ORR may deny youth a licensed placement only under defined 20 circumstances. Settlement ¶ 21.

21
22
23
24
25
26
27

³ Other circuits may hold to the contrary, at least as concerns prospective relief. E.g., 28 Benjamin v. Jacobson, 172 F.3d 144, 164 (2d Cir. 1999).

1 At any given time, ORR confines approximately 200 youth in three types of 2 unlicensed facilities:⁴ (1) “staff-secure” facilities; (2) RTCs; and (3) juvenile jails.⁵
3 Class members have a clear interest in avoiding step-up to unlicensed facilities.

4 In contrast to children in licensed placements, children in staff-secure facilities
5 and RTCs typically must wear institutional clothing, are kept under 24-hour 6 surveillance, have limited contact with family, and are summarily disciplined for 7 violations of facility rules. Decl. of Isabella M., Exhibit 10 (PX 61) ¶ 2 (“Isabella 8 M.”) (minor under 24-hour surveillance); Decl. of Gloria P., Exhibit 41 (PX 233) ¶ 2
9 (“Gloria P.”) (same); Decl. of John Doe 2, Exhibit 74 (PX 470) ¶ 27 (“If you lose two 10 points in a day, you don’t go outside your room.”). A children’s lawyer describes 11 security at a staff-secure facility as follows:

12 The entrance to the area of the building where the UAC children are detained is 13 always locked, and I must press a buzzer and wait for security to allow me to 14 enter. The door is locked from both sides, and so a staff member is also 15 required to unlock the door and let me out . . . Once I have entered the 16 Morrison Facility, I must . . . await staff to open a second locked door before I 17 can enter the hallway leading to the locked room where I meet with [my 18 client]. To my recollection, every door that I have seen be opened at Morrison 19 must be opened by a staff member with a key.

21 ⁴ A “licensed program” must be “licensed by an appropriate State agency to provide 22 residential, group, or foster care services for dependent children. . . . All homes and 23 facilities operated by licensed programs . . . [must] be non-secure as required under 24 state law. . . .” Settlement Definition 6. Although staff-secure, RTC, and secure 25 facilities may hold a license of some sort, they are not “licensed placements” as the Settlement defines them. See 24A Order at 4 (Yolo juvenile hall “not licensed to care for dependent children.”).

26 ⁵ ORR currently houses detained youth in three juvenile jails: Yolo County Juvenile 27 Hall in California, and Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center (“SVJC”) and Northern 28 Virginia Juvenile Detention Center (“NoVA”) in Virginia. Decl. of Carlos Holguín, Exhibit 87 (PX 648) ¶ 3 (“Holguín”).

1 Decl. of Leland Baxter-Neal, Exhibit 5 (PX 32) ¶¶ 9-10; see also Decl. of Nicolás C., 2 Exhibit 2 (PX 13, 16-17) ¶¶ 7-8 (“The conditions of Paso are very different from 3 those of the shelter in Kansas City. . . . Everything has a key. . . . I always have to 4 wear a uniform, which makes me feel like a prisoner.”).

5 Conditions in secure facilities are more restrictive and prison-like still. Class
6 member Samuel W. describes them as follows:

7 I am suffering a lot being in the Yolo Juvenile Detention Center. It is a jail and 8 I sleep in a locked, small jail cell. I can’t leave here and have no freedom at all.

9 We only get one hour of time outside each day. I have to live in a small cell
10 with concrete walls. We have to sleep on hard beds with very thin mattresses.

11 Decl. of Samuel W., Exhibit 44 (PX 248) ¶ 8 (“Samuel W.”).

12 Youth in secure facilities report being handcuffed, locked in cells, and pepper
13 sprayed. Decl. of Julio Z., Exhibit 64 (PX 420-21) ¶¶ 29, 31 (“Julio Z.”) (“I sleep in a 14 locked jail cell. . . . The guards also push us, pepper spray us[.] . . .”); Decl. of John 15 Doe 1, Exhibit 73 (PX 460, 462) ¶¶ 9, 20 (“At Shenandoah, my room had a mattress, 16 a sink, and a toilet . . . I was forced to wear handcuffs on my wrists and shackles on 17 my feet for approximately 10 days in a row.”); Decl. of John Doe 3, Exhibit 75 (PX 18 475) ¶ 12 (“[W]henever I was put in restriction, they took away my mattress and 19 blanket. They took my clothes away about 8 times.”); Decl. of D.M., Exhibit 76 (PX
20 483-84) ¶¶ 16-18 (Children strapped into chairs, and bags placed over their heads; 21 youth thought, “they are going to suffocate me. . .”).

22 B ORR affords youth neither adequate notice nor opportunity to be 23 heard in denying them licensed placements.

24 Despite their clear interest in licensed placement, ORR regularly steps up youth
25 without giving them notice or the least opportunity to be heard. Class member 26 Roberto F.’s description is fairly typical:

27 One day I had a disagreement on the soccer field. A staff member approached 28 me suddenly. I was surprised and without thinking I reacted, but I was accused

1 of beating him. About two days later, suddenly at four in the morning the 2 supervisor came to tell me that they were going to move me to another
3 program. And that is how I arrived at Shenandoah. They gave me no hearing or 4 opportunity to explain my side of the facts.

5 Decl. of Roberto F., Exhibit 37 (PX 214, 218) ¶ 7 (“Roberto F.”); see also Decl. of 6 Jaime V., Exhibit 45 (PX 252-53) ¶¶ 11-14 (youth not told where he was going;
7 thought he was being deported); Decl. of Ricardo U., Exhibit 39 (PX 225) ¶ 2
8 (stepped up minor falsely told he was being stepped down); Gloria P. (PX 233) ¶ 3
9 (stepped up minor falsely told she was going to another shelter).⁶

10 And ORR step-ups are entirely unilateral. The agency purports to use a 11 “placement tool,” into which it enters information about a child. ORR, Children 12 Entering the United States Unaccompanied: § 1.3.2, available at 13 www.acf.hhs.gov/orr/resource/children-entering-the-united-states-unaccompanied-
14 section-1#1.3.2 (last rev. Apr. 22, 2016). The tool generates a “score” and 15 recommends placement: licensed or stepped up. Only ORR supervisory federal field 16 specialists may override the tool’s recommendation. Id.

17 Once ORR decides to step up a youth, it sometimes uses a form, “Notice of 18 Placement in a Restrictive Setting,” Exhibit 22, PX 114-15, which, to Plaintiffs’
19 knowledge, exists only in English, to explain its reasons for step-up. Most youth 20 report never having seen the form. Samuel W. (PX 248) ¶¶ 2, 7 (“I speak Spanish and 21 only a few words of English. . . . When the government sent me to Yolo Juvenile 22 Detention Center, . . . I don’t remember them ever giving me any explanation of my 23 rights in Spanish . . .”); Supp. Decl. of Isabella M., Exhibit 11 (PX 66-67) ¶ 6 (minor 24 never given form notice of placement in restrictive setting); Supp. Decl. of David I., 25 Exhibit 15 (PX 86-87) ¶ 3 (same).

26
27 ⁶ ORR’s failing to notify children of the basis for step-up also denies notice of their 28 right to judicial review in violation of Settlement ¶ 24C.

1 Even were ORR to issue its form notice consistently, it would do class 2 members little good. Few read English, and ORR allows neither children nor their 3 lawyers to inspect or rebut its evidence or otherwise oppose step-up. Short of going to 4 federal court, children simply have no procedure by which they may contest ORR
5 decisions to deny licensed placement.⁷ Decl. of Sofia O., Exhibit 40 (PX 228) ¶ 5
6 (“Sofia O.”) (“I did not have an opportunity to object to the transfer.”); Gloria P. (PX 7 233) ¶ 3 (“I don’t remember receiving any document that explained that I had the 8 right to challenge the government’s decision to send me to Shiloh.”); Decl. of Javier
9 C., Exhibit 30 (PX 170) ¶ 4 (“Javier C.”) (same); Decl. of D.M., Exhibit 76 (PX 481)
10 ¶ 5 (“But I never had a chance to dispute this [transfer.]”).

11 This is not exactly what the Ninth Circuit envisioned when it affirmed this 12 Court’s order requiring ORR to provide minors bond hearings:

13 For those minors in secure detention, bond hearings additionally provide an 14 opportunity to contest the basis of such confinement. For example, the TVPRA 15 allows children to be placed in secure detention facilities only if they pose a 16 safety risk to themselves or others, or have committed a criminal offense.

17 These are precisely the determinations made by an immigration judge at a bond 18 hearing.

19 Providing unaccompanied minors with the right to a hearing under Paragraph 20 24A therefore ensures that they are not held in secure detention without cause.

21
22 ⁷ ORR purports to allow children to request “reconsideration” of placement in a 23 secure or RTC facility, but only after they have spent 30 days in one. Exhibit 22, PX
24 115. Youth who have spent far longer in such facilities report knowing nothing about 25 this or any other means to request step-down. E.g., Gloria P. (PX 233) ¶ 4 (youth 26 detained nearly four months in RTC; “No one has sat down with me and reviewed 27 whether I should be stepped down . . . or told me . . . what I have to do in order to 28 step down.”); Decl. of Carlos A. Exhibit 31 (PX 175) ¶ 5 (“Carlos A.”) (youth detained three months in juvenile hall; “I don’t remember them ever telling me that I could ask for the decision to put me here to be reviewed . . .”); Decl. of Gabriela N., Exhibit 19 (PX 103) ¶ 7 (same; youth detained three months in RTC).

1 Flores v. Sessions, 862 F.3d 863, 868 (9th Cir. 2017) (emphasis added).

2 ORR simply disregards the Ninth Circuit’s holding, insisting that it “only
3 applies to the question of dangerousness as it applies to release. An immigration 4 judge’s order may be taken under advisement when making a placement decision but 5 is not binding on ORR . . .” Email from T. Biswas, Feb. 23, 2018, Exhibit 70, PX
6 448.⁸

7 Nor is class members’ suing in federal court a viable remedy. ORR contrives to 8 deny them counsel to challenge step-ups, thus ensuring that indigent, non-English-9 speaking minors have no meaningful chance to do so.

10 TVPRA § 235(c)(5) requires ORR to “ensure, to the greatest extent practicable 11 . . . that all unaccompanied alien children who are or have been in the custody of 12 [ORR], and who are not [from contiguous countries], have counsel to represent them
13 in legal proceedings or matters and protect them from mistreatment. . .” (Emphasis 14 added.)

15 Congress appropriates funds so ORR may provide lawyers to minors in its 16 custody. Between 2009 and 2013, ORR paid the Vera Institute of Justice nearly $40
17 million to provide legal services. Exhibit 16, Plaintiffs’ Exhibits, Aug. 12, 2016 (Dkt.
18 239-3), at 51. Vera sub-contracts with legal aid programs to represent class members.

20 All this does class members little good in securing their rights under the 27 ⁸ Mr. Biswas issued his email in the case of former class member Santiago H. An Custody Order, Feb. 21, 2018, Exhibit 68, PX 443. ORR simply refused.

1 or placement decisions, no matter how arbitrary or otherwise unlawful ORR’s
2 decisions appeared. I know of no Vera-funded legal services provider who has 3 ever represented a minor in federal court against ORR.

5 Lorilei Williams, Exhibit 85 (PX 617) ¶ 19 (ORR “hobbles free legal services
6 providers who undertake to represent detained children.”); Decl. of Megan Stuart,
7 July 29, 2016, Exhibit 86 (PX 626-27) ¶¶ 22-24 (same).

8 As a practical matter, Vera-funded services are the only legal help most class 9 members will ever get. Mixon (PX 587) ¶ 8 (“Apart from Vera Institute-funded legal 10 services providers, I know of only a handful of lawyers who are truly versed in the 11 rights of immigrant and refugee minors in ORR custody. In my experience, private 12 practitioners generally lack the resources to pursue federal litigation on behalf of their 13 clients[.] . . .”).

14 ORR’s blocking Vera lawyers from helping detained minors challenge step-up 15 ensures that few, if any, class members will ever do so.

16 D Peremptory step-ups violate ¶¶ 19, 21 and 24B of the Settlement.

17 ORR’s policies deny minors licensed placements on grounds neither the 18 Settlement nor the TVPRA authorize.

19 The Settlement permits unlicensed placement in five circumstances⁹: the minor
20 (1) has committed a violent crime or non-petty delinquent act; (2) threatened violence
21 while in federal custody; (3) is an unusual escape-risk; (4) is so disruptive that secure 22 confinement is necessary to protect the minor or others; or (5) must be protected from 23 smugglers and the like. Settlement ¶ 21.¹⁰

25 _____
26 ⁹ The TVPRA allows ORR only two: i.e., the youth “is a danger to self or others or 27 has been charged with having committed a criminal offense.” TVPRA
28 § 235(c)(2)(A).

¹⁰ Even if an exception to licensed placement applies, ORR must house children in the “least restrictive setting” practicable, Settlement ¶ 11, and may not place minors in a

1 ORR’s “Notice of Placement in a Restrictive Setting,” Exhibit 22, however,
2 posits seven reasons for secure, four for staff-secure, and four for RTC placement, a 3 total of 15 grounds for denying class members their right to licensed placement.

4 Some of these “extras” express little more than vague suspicion that a juvenile 5 might be dangerous: e.g., “inappropriate sexual behavior,” or “[h]av[ing] self-
6 disclosed . . . gang involvement prior to placement in ORR custody that requires 7 further assesment.” Paragraph 21, however, allows step-up under specific 8 circumstances, not mere vague suspicion.

9 There can be no material dispute that ORR in fact dispatches youth to secure 10 facilities precipitously. In Saravia v. Sessions, 280 F. Supp. 3d 1168 (N.D. Cal.
11 2017), ICE re-arrested several juveniles whom ORR had earlier released, allegedly 12 because they were involved with gangs. Id. at 1178. ORR sent the youth to juvenile 13 halls, including Yolo County’s. Id. at 1199. Yet according to Yolo County Juvenile 14 Hall’s Chief Probation Officer, ORR’s evidence for sending the minors to his facility
15 was “often insufficient, and . . . the Yolo County Probation Department . . . did not 16 have just cause to detain most of these minors.” Id. at 1199.

17 The court preliminarily enjoined ORR to provide re-arrested juveniles bond 18 hearings and to release those whom immigration judges found non-dangerous. Id. at 19 1205-06. Twenty-nine youth received hearings; judges ordered ORR to release 20 twenty-six. Request for Judicial Notice, Saravia v. Sessions, No. 18-15114 (9th Cir., 21 March 16, 2018), Exhibit 79 (PX 554-55). All told, ORR had wrongly sent 90 percent 22 to secure facilities.

23 This Court has ample discretion to require meaningful procedural protection
24 against ORR’s wrongfully denying class members their right to licensed placement. It 25 should do so by entering Plaintiffs’ proposed order.

28 “another licensed program” are available. Settlement ¶ 23.

1 IV ORR UNLAWFULLY MEDICATES YOUTH WITHOUT PARENTAL AUTHORIZATION.

2 ORR also regularly places youth on multiple psychotropic medications. It often 3 tells children little or nothing about the drugs, nor does the agency obtain parental 4 consent, or the legal equivalent thereof, to medicate children.

5 There can be no question that psychotropic drugs can seriously and 6 permanently injure children, yet ORR routinely administers such drugs to youth in 7 utter disregard of state laws designed to support children's mental health. Even when 8 a child may truly benefit from psychotropics, both the law and common decency
9 demand that parents decide whether their child should be medicated. Again, ORR 10 prefers to act autocratically, regularly medicating children without consulting their 11 parents, even those readily available to ORR and facility staff.

12 A ORR regularly compels youth to take psychotropic medications.

13 ORR regularly places detained children on multiple psychotropic drugs 14 regardless of the child's concerns or wishes.

15 Sometimes, facility staff will not tell youth what drugs they are being given or 16 why. See, e.g., Julio Z. (PX 418) ¶ 16 ("I never knew exactly what the pills were.");
17 Julio Z. Patient Profile, Exhibit 63 (PX 413) (listing Clonazepam, Divalproex, 18 Duloxetine, Guanfacine, Latuda, Geodon, and Olanzapine); Decl. of David I., Exhibit 19 14 (PX 81) ¶ 7 ("David I.") ("I take four pills in the morning and about four to six 20 pills in the evening. I don't know what all these pills are for, but I think the one I take 21 at night are for depression and anxiety."); David I. Patient Profile, Exhibit 57 (PX
22 400) (listing Clonidine, Escitalopram, and Quetiapine); Decl. of Rosa L., Exhibit 17 23 (PX 95) ¶ 5 ("Rosa L.") ("I take 4 or 5 pills . . . one of the pills is for anxiety. I don't 24 know what the other pills are for."); Rosa L. Patient Profile, Exhibit 58 (PX 402)
25 (listing Aripiprazole, Chlorpromaz, Desmopressin, Escitalopram, Lamotrigine, 26 Lithium, and Trazodone); Javier C. (PX 170) ¶ 5 ("I took nine pills in the morning 27 and seven in the evening. I don't know what medications I was taking . . ."); Decl. of 28 Maricela J., Exhibit 48 (PX 262) ¶ 4 ("Maricela J.") ("I take 4 pills in the morning . . .

1 then I have to take 5 more pills at night. I have not been told why I am required to 2 take all this medication.”).

3 ORR gives class members no choice but to take whatever psychotropic
4 medications it prescribes. Youth report being told that if they refuse drugs they will 5 remain detained, be denied release or privileges, or be physically forced to take them.
6 See, e.g., Julio Z. (PX 417-18) ¶¶ 15, 16 (“The staff threatened to throw me on the 7 ground and force me to take the medication. I also saw staff throw another youth to 8 the ground, pry his mouth open and force him to take the medicine. . . . They told me
9 that if I did not take the medicine I could not leave, that the only way I could get out
10 of Shiloh was if I took the pills.”); David I. (PX 82) ¶ 8 (“I have not refused taking 11 the pills because I was told that . . . would make me stay at Shiloh longer . . .”); Rosa 12 L. (PX 95) ¶ 6 (“Sometimes they give me forced injections . . . one or two staff hold 13 my arms and the nurse gives me an injection.”); Maricela J. (PX 263) ¶ 8 (“I
14 witnessed staff members forcefully give medication four times . . . two staff members
15 pinned down the girl . . . and a doctor gave her one or two injections . . .”); Isabella
16 M. (PX 62) ¶ 14; Sofia O. (PX 229) ¶ 11.¹¹

17 Nor does ORR allow children who object to being medicated any procedural 18 recourse. See, e.g., Julio Z. (PX 418) ¶ 20 (“I tried to ask [the doctor] why I was 19 being forced to take the medications but he would ignore my questions . . . I wasn’t 20 told of any way that I could challenge the decision to be on the medications.”); the bed.”).

2 because it calmed me.”).

3 B ORR unlawfully usurps parental rights to make medication
4 decisions.

5 ORR medicates children wholly without regard for their parents’ wishes. See,
6 e.g., Decl. of Mother of Isabella M., Exhibit 12 (PX 71, 74) ¶ 4 (“Mother of Isabella
7 M.”) (“Nobody asked me for my permission to give medications to my daughter,
8 even though the staff at Shiloh has always had my telephone number and address.”);
9 Maricela J. (PX 263) ¶ 7 (“I don’t think anyone in my family was asked if it was okay
10 for me to take medicine.”); David I. (PX 81) ¶ 7 (“As far as I know, ORR did not ask 11 my mother for permission before they gave me the medication.”).

12 ORR or facility staff instead sign forms “consenting” to children’s medication,
13 though the forms themselves recognize the consenting authority only of a “Parent, 14 Guardian, or Conservator.” See, e.g., Decl. of Carter White, Exhibit 89 (PX 654-55)
15 (Shiloh staff sign consent form, not parent, relatives or potential sponsor); (Isabella

25 ¹² ORR’s forms appear to require its own consent before facilities medicate children, 26 but they do not suggest that facilities obtain consent from a child’s parent or 27 judicially authorized consentor. See, e.g., ORR Authorization for Medical, Dental,
28 and Mental Health Care for Carlos A., Exhibit 88, PX 651-52. As discussed below,
Texas law requires such judicial authorization in the absence of parental consent.
Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 266.004(b).

1 C Psychotropic drugs threaten children with serious, long-term injury.

2 Psychotropic medications act on the central nervous system and affect 3 cognition, emotions, and behavior, and serious, long-lasting adverse effects are 4 common. In adults, psychotropic drugs can have serious and sometimes irreversible
5 side effects, including psychosis, seizures, irreversible movement disorders, suicidal
6 ideation, weight gain, and organ damage. Government Accountability Office, GAO-7 12-270T, Foster Children: HHS Guidance Could Help States Improve Oversight of 8 Psychotropic Prescriptions, 5-6 (Dec. 1, 2011) (“HHS Guidance”).

9 Comparatively little is known about the effects of psychotropic drugs on 10 children and adolescents. ACF Children’s Bureau, ACYF-CB-IM-12-03, Information
11 Memorandum, 7-8 (Apr. 11, 2012) (“ACF Memorandum”). The FDA has approved
12 only a few such drugs for children, and when these are prescribed, careful oversight 13 and monitoring are essential. HHS Guidance at 4. Giving children multiple 14 psychotropic drugs is almost always to be avoided because “[i]ncreasing the number 15 of drugs used concurrently increases the likelihood of adverse reactions and long-16 term side effects, such as high cholesterol or diabetes . . .” Id.

17 The importance of oversight when giving psychotropic medications to children 18 is well established. Without it, the potential for abuse—including using drugs as 19 “chemical straight-jackets” to control children, rather than to treat actual mental 20 health needs—is unacceptably high. See 42 U.S.C. § 622(b)(15)(A) (requiring states 21 to develop “a plan for the ongoing oversight and coordination of health care services
22 for any child in a foster care placement,” including “protocols for the appropriate use
23 and monitoring of psychotropic medications.”); ACF Memorandum 10-11
24 (“Strengthened oversight of psychotropic medication use is necessary” as is “close 25 supervision and monitoring . . . [and] careful management and oversight” in 26 administering children psychotropics.).

27 Not surprisingly, children medicated in ORR custody report negative side
28 effects, including nausea, dizziness, somnolence, depression, and grotesque weight

1 gain. See, e.g., Julio Z. (PX 418) ¶ 18 (“After taking the medication, I was more tired,
2 I felt sad and my eyes got teary . . . I began to gain a lot of weight . . . In 3 approximately 60 days, I gained 45 pounds.”); Javier C. (PX 170) ¶ 5 (“The medicine
4 made me fat. I used to be really skinny.”); Maricela J. (PX 262) ¶ 5 (“When I take 5 medicine, I do not have any mood. . . . I have suffered side effects including 6 headaches, loss of appetite and nausea.”); Mother of Isabella M. (PX 71, 74) ¶ 4
7 (“[T]hey are requiring [my daughter] to take very powerful medications for anxiety. I
8 have noted that [she] is becoming more nervous, fearful, and she trembles. [She] tells 9 me that she has fallen several times . . . because the medications were too powerful 10 and she couldn’t walk.”); Letter re: Psychotropic Medications, Exhibit 27, 12 recommends drugs be “taper[ed] off”).

13 D ORR’s disregard for state law safeguards in medicating youth
14 violates the Settlement.

15 Facilities in which ORR places minors with mental health needs must “meet 16 those standards . . . set forth in Exhibit 1.” Settlement ¶¶ 6, 8.¹³ Exhibit 1 requires that 17 licensed programs “comply with all applicable state child welfare laws and 18 regulations . . . and shall provide or arrange for the following services for each minor

ORR facilities are also administered psychotropics. See, e.g., Julio Z. Parental

1 determination of unfitness. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 151.001(a)(6). Only rarely does 2 Texas law permit non-parents to authorize a child’s medical treatment. Tex. Fam.
3 Code Ann. § 32.001. Even adults with the “actual care, control, and possession of the 4 child” must obtain “written authorization to consent from a person having the right to 5 consent” to treat a minor. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 151.001(a)(4).

6 When the state’s Department of Family and Protective Services (“DFPS”) acts
7 in loco parentis, Texas law requires that it obtain judicial authorization to treat a 8 minor. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 266.004(a), (b). DFPS may not unilaterally designate 9 itself or treatment center staff as a child’s medical consenter. DFPS, CHILD 10 PROTECTIVE SERVICES HANDBOOK § 11113.2.

11 Consent to administer psychotropics to dependent youth must be given by 12 someone lawfully authorized to do so, and the consenting party must be informed of 13 risks and alternatives to the proposed medications. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 266.0042.
14 The consenter must also be told about non-pharmacological alternatives to 15 psychotropic drugs. CHILD PROTECTIVE SERVICES HANDBOOK, supra, § 11323.

16 Preferring autocracy to due process, ORR does none of this. The Court should 17 order ORR to obtain parental consent, or the lawful equivalent thereof, and to 18 otherwise comply fully with state law when administering psychotropic drugs to 19 detained youth.

20 V ORR PEREMPTORILY EXTENDS MINORS’ DETENTION ON SUSPICION THAT 21 AVAILABLE CUSTODIANS MAY BE UNFIT.

22 Youth may spend weeks, months or even years in ORR custody. Each day,
23 they risk offending staff or violating facility rules, whereupon ORR may summarily
24 step them up.¹⁵ Beyond subjecting them to institutional security and drugging, step-up

25 Medical Authorization Form, Dec. 4, 2016, Exhibit 62, PX 411 (Yolo Institutional 26 Services Director provide medical consent in place of parent/guardian).

27 ¹⁵ At any given time, ORR detains about 40 youth in RTCs, 50 in juvenile halls, and 28 115 in staff-secure facilities. Holguín (PX 648) ¶ 4. ORR’s data do not include the average length of stay for youth placed in these facilities. However, in December

1 deals youth an additional blow: once ORR sends a youth to an unlicensed placement,
2 his or her chances of prompt release vanish.

3 Settlement ¶ 14 provides: “Where the INS determines that the detention of the 4 minor is not required either to secure his or her timely appearance before the INS or 5 the immigration court, or to ensure the minor’s safety or that of others, the INS shall 6 release a minor from its custody without unnecessary delay . . .”¹⁶ Further grounding
7 ORR’s obligation to minimize children’s detention, Settlement ¶ 18 provides, “Upon 8 taking a minor into custody, the INS . . . shall make and record the prompt and 9 continuous efforts on its part toward . . . the release of the minor . . .”

10 A ORR unlawfully demands exceptional abilities in custodians for 11 stepped-up youth.

12 The Settlement is clear: ORR has three—and only three—reasons to continue 13 youth in detention: (1) dangerousness; (2) flight-risk; and (3) the lack of a custodian
14 who will not harm or neglect them. Settlement ¶ 14.

15 ORR professes not to detain youth as flight-risks. ORR, Interim Guidance on 16 Flores v. Sessions, July 18, 2017, Exhibit 8, PX 48 (“Interim Guidance”). And since 17 July 2017, immigration judges have reviewed a child’s dangerousness. 24A Order, 18 aff’d, Flores v. Sessions, supra, 862 F.3d 863.

19 ORR continues, however, to detain children indefinitely because it suspects a 20 potential custodian may be unfit, and it does so entirely without timely neutral and 21

22 2017 ORR released just one youth to a custodian from Shenandoah Valley Juvenile 23 Center, one from Yolo Juvenile Hall, and none from Northern Virginia Juvenile 24 Detention Center. Id. (PX 649) ¶ 5.

25 Children in RTCs faced similar odds: ORR released one class member from 26 MercyFirst to a custodian during December, and one from Shiloh. Id.

26 ¹⁶ If a child has more than one potential custodian, ORR must release first to a parent,
27 then to a legal guardian, adult sibling, aunt, uncle, or grandparent, an unrelated adult 28 or entity designated by the minor’s parent, a juvenile shelter, and finally, if there is no likely alternative to long-term detention, an unrelated adult. Settlement ¶ 14.

1 detached review. E.g., Interim Guidance, PX 48. In reality, ORR extends non-
2 dangerous children’s confinement for reasons having little or nothing to do with a 3 custodian’s actual propensity to harm or neglect.

4 In June 2017 ORR amended its online “Policy Guide” to provide: “The 5 ORR/FFS elevates release decisions to the ORR Director, or the Director’s designee,
6 for any UAC in a secure or staff secure facility, or for any UAC who had previously
7 been in a secure or staff secure facility. The ORR Director or designee makes release 8 decisions for children in these types of facilities.” ORR, Children Entering the United 11 ORR’s director must now approve the release of all class members “who are in 12 or were previously placed in a secure or staff-secure facility [even if they] have 13 prevailed in a Flores bond hearing on a question of dangerousness . . .” or were 14 stepped up on the weight of “incomplete, inaccurate or erroneous information” that

16 26, 2018, Exhibit 24, PX 120 (emphasis added). Children, their parents and other 17 available custodians describe a Kafkaesque experience in trying to free a child from 18 ORR detention.

19 Class member Santiago H.’s experience illustrates ORR’s refusal to release 20 children from secure detention. In November 2017, ORR confined Santiago at the 21 Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center (“SVJC”). Case Review, undated, Exhibit 71, at 22 PX 451. SVJC personnel determined that Santiago “does not present any mental 23 health concerns,” “gets along well with others,” and “does not appear to present a risk
24 to himself or the community at this time.” Id. at PX 452. SVJC recommended ORR
25 release Santiago to his aunt. Id. ORR ignored the findings and recommendation, 26 leaving Santiago in secure confinement for months.

27 In February 2018, Immigration Judge John Bryant held a bond hearing and 28 found Santiago not a danger to the community. The court ordered ORR to step him

1 down to a less secure placement. Custody Order, Feb. 21, 2018, Exhibit 68, PX 443.
2 ORR ignored the order. Email from T. Biswas, Feb. 23, 2018, Exhibit 70, PX 448.

3 In March Santiago turned 18, and ORR turned him over to ICE. ICE
4 dispatched Santiago to an adult detention facility. Later that month, Immigration
5 Judge Karen Donoso-Stevens ordered Santiago released. Order of the Immigration
6 Judge, March 20, 2018, Exhibit 69, PX 445. Santiago is now free to live with his 7 aunt, which ORR could block only because she would harm or neglect him. The only 8 difference: Santiago was now a day older.¹⁷

9 In September 2017, ORR placed class member Nicolás C. at the Paso staff-10 secure facility in Portland, Oregon. According to his mother, ORR prolonged her 11 son's confinement because she had earlier suffered from cancer:

12 [Case worker] Erich . . . assured me again and again that the [release] process 13 would not take long, about 30 days at the most. . . . I sent [all the documents he 14 requested] without delay. . . .

15 However, Erich kept asking me for more and more documents: among them, 16 files from doctors to verify that my cancer would not hinder me from taking 17 care of my son. These . . . caused me great sorrow, and they did not seem 18 necessary to have my son. I believe that a mother has the right to take care of 19 her child even though she is incapacitated, although I am not. It occurred to me 20 that they were looking for an excuse to deny me my son[.] . . .

13 ¹⁸ Accounts abound of ORR prolonging children’s detention for no apparent reason.
14 E.g., Carlos A. (PX 176) ¶ 10 (minor detained four months; “My case manager said
15 the only reason that I haven’t been released is that the government is now reviewing 16 my case. They have not told me how long it would take . . .”); Decl. of Miguel B., 17 Exhibit 32 (PX 179) ¶ 5 (youth detained five months; “My mom began trying to get 18 me back . . . Someone came to inspect her house and everything came out well.
19 Neither of us understands why I am still here.”); Roberto F. (PX 214, 217) ¶ 6 (youth 20 detained ten months; “[M]y mom moved from Kansas to Texas to be closer to me. . .
21 . They continued to take long making the decision to let me live with her. According 22 to her, the government did a study of the home, and everything went well.”).

23 ¹⁹ The evidence suggests that months or years of detention itself brings on the 24 psychological distress for which ORR then medicates children:

25 Since last year, when my daughter became a prisoner, I have noticed that she is 26 more and more depressed . . . She tells me that she doesn’t want to be in the 27 detention center. When my daughter and I lived together in Honduras, we 28 never had mental problems. . . . In my opinion, detention is affecting [Isabella] a lot, and she would quickly get better if they were to return her to me.

29 Mother of Isabella M. (PX 70-71, 73-74) ¶ 3; see also Grandfather of Gabriela N.
30 (PX 439) ¶¶ 14-15 (granddaughter “did not have any mental health problems. . . . I 31 think that being locked up for several months has made her be more anxious and 32 upset.”); Excerpts from ORR File for Victoria R., Exhibit 84, PX 605 (“Separation
33 from family” and “Frustration of lengthy reunification process” are “Major Stressors” 34 for the child).

1 Since May 2017—some 10 months now—ORR has detained Isabella M. In 2 early October 2017, ORR placed her at the Shiloh RTC, from which it has doggedly
3 refused to release her because “[t]he doctor has said I can’t leave until I can control
4 myself. He hasn’t told me a time frame for how long it will be before I’m ready.”

5 Isabella M. (PX 61) ¶ 3. Isabella M.’s mother corroborates:

6 During the summer of last year, a home investigator, Jorge Arango, came twice
7 to evaluate my house. . . . When he finished, he told me that everything was 8 approved . . . Much time went by without any further word . . . I called several 9 times asking when they were going to give me [Isabella] back. They always 10 answered that it depended on the doctor . . .

11 Mother of Isabella M. (PX 71, 74) ¶ 5; see also Decl. of Daniella Q., Exhibit 9 (PX 12 57) ¶ 3 (“I have been told that the doctor has to say it is alright to release me to my 13 dad.”); Decl. of Victoria R., Exhibit 13 (PX 78) ¶ 4 (same); Decl. of Arturo S.,
14 Exhibit 21 (PX 110) ¶ 3 (same).

15 C ORR must give non-dangerous youth a prompt and meaningful
16 opportunity to be heard regarding a proposed custodian’s fitness.

17 Rather than assess custodians’ basic fitness, ORR consistently demands
18 extraordinary prowess of stepped-up class members’ custodians.²⁰ The Settlement, 19 however, allows ORR to detain a non-dangerous minor only if it “has reason to 20 believe [an available custodian] may harm or neglect the minor . . .” Settlement ¶ 11
21 (emphasis added).²¹

22 Even assuming, arguendo, the Settlement were to allow ORR to demand
23 exceptional qualifications of custodians for stepped-up youth, it affords no 24

25 ²⁰ Inasmuch as ORR steps up youth autocratically in the first place, its leveraging 26 step-up to confine youth until and unless a doyen appears is palpable exacerbation.

27 ²¹ ORR’s prolonging class members’ confinement via such policies also violates their 28 right to placement in the least restrictive setting consistent with their best interests, a violation of TVPRA § 235(c)(2)(A).

1 meaningful chance to be heard on the need for extra qualifications or whether a given
2 custodian possesses them. Again, ORR simply decrees what qualifications a 3 custodian must have and then decides unilaterally whether he or she possesses them.
4 ORR knows that more process than that is surely due.

5 In Beltran v. Cardall, 222 F. Supp. 3d 476 (E.D. Va. 2016), ORR refused to 6 release a youth on the ground he “‘require[d] an environment with a high level of 7 supervision and structure,’ and it did not ‘appear . . . that [his mother’s] home [could]
8 provide the structure and supervision necessary[.] . . .’” Id. at 480 (internal citation 9 omitted).

10 The minor’s mother sued to compel ORR to release her son. Id. at 481. The 11 district court initially denied a writ, id., but the Fourth Circuit reversed in part and 12 instructed the trial court to decide whether ORR had denied due process. Id. Held:
13 “[O]nce ORR decided to withhold RMB from Petitioner’s care, ORR ‘ha[d] the 14 burden to initiate’ proceedings to justify its action. . . . [It] could not simply require 15 Petitioner to change the agency’s mind.” Id. at 486 (internal citations omitted). The 16 court ordered ORR to release the minor immediately, adding that ORR could refer 17 any concerns it may have for the youth’s well-being to state juvenile authorities. Id. at 18 489.

19 Again in Santos v. Smith, 260 F. Supp. 3d 598 (W.D. Va. 2017), ORR refused 20 to release a minor to his mother on the ground that “‘he requires an environment with 21 a high level of supervision and structure that [his mother is] unable to provide at this 22 time[.] . . .’” Id. at 602. Again, the family sued to compel release. Id. at 600. Again, 23 the court held that ORR’s refusing release denied due process: “[H]ad better or more 24 process been given (especially as to the delay and the burden being on Ms. Santos to 25 initiate and justify reunification, rather than the default rule being otherwise), the 26 outcome could have been different. . . .” Id. at 614.

27 ORR remains undeterred, regularly extending children’s confinement because 28 it questions their proposed custodians’ fitness while refusing to submit its suspicions

1 to neutral and detached review. E.g., Mother of Nicolás C. (PX 4, 8) ¶ 14 (nobody 2 “has told me anything about my son. I have not been made aware of any procedure by 3 which a mother can oppose the prolonged detention of her child [. . .]”); Decl. of 4 Sister of Victoria R., Exhibit 65 (PX 426-27, 429-30) ¶ 4 (“They didn’t give me any 5 opportunity to explain to them . . . that nothing would happen [to my sister] if they 6 would let me take care of her.”); Grandfather of Gabriela N. (PX 439) ¶ 12 (“When I
7 reached out to [my granddaughter’s] social worker at Shiloh, she told me that ORR
8 threw out my application [to be her custodian] . . . ORR has never officially told me .
9 . . . that my application has been rejected.”); Camila G. (PX 394) ¶ 13 (child detained 10 one year and three months; “I don’t know what I can do or what the next step can be 11 for me to try and get out of the shelter if ORR does not allow me to live with my aunt 12 . . .”).

13 In Beltran and Santos the courts held ORR’s vetting of custodians lacking in 14 threshold constitutionality.²² Here, a consent decree requires ORR to release minors
15 promptly to qualified custodians whether or not release is constitutionally required.
16

18 ²² ORR may not detain youth “for their own good” without proving that their parents 19 are unfit. Quilloin v. Walcott, 434 U.S. 246, 255 (1978) (“Due Process Clause would 20 be offended ‘[if] a State were to attempt to force the breakup of a natural family . . .
21 without some showing of unfitness and for the sole reason that to do so was thought 22 to be in the children’s best interest.’”) (internal citations omitted).

23 Obviously, ORR detention also impairs children’s right to physical liberty. Saravia, 24 supra, 280 F. Supp. 3d at 1195.

25 The Settlement expands these rights, entitling class members to release to specified 26 non-parents, including grandparents and adult siblings.

27 ORR’s confining youth until it thinks them mentally fit raises further constitutional 28 concerns. It is hard to distinguish such detention from civil commitment, which, of course, represents a “massive curtailment of liberty,” lawful only with due process and proof of dangerousness to others. O’Connor v. Donaldson, 422 U.S. 563, 575 (1975) (government may not “confine the mentally ill merely to ensure them a living standard superior to that they enjoy in the private community”).

1 Cf. Local No. 93, Int’l Ass’n of Firefighters. v. Cleveland, 478 U.S. 501, 525 (1986)
2 (consent decree may confer greater relief than could have been obtained at trial).

3 ORR’s peremptorily declaring custodians unfit falls short of constitutional 4 minimums, and it can hardly satisfy the Settlement. The Court should order ORR to 5 release non-dangerous class members promptly to available custodians or else submit 6 doubts about their fitness for neutral and detached review.

7 VI CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, this Court should grant this motion and enter
