James 16 Burnham here on behalf of the defendants, along with Michael 17 Baer, Eric Womack and Joseph Borson. 18 THE COURT: All right. Good morning to you all. We are here for an oral ruling on the plaintiffs' 19 20 application for a temporary restraining order. 21 And I'd better get some water right away here. 22 (Brief pause.) 23 On November 7th, 2018, President Trump held a news 24 conference at the White House. Soon after it started, he 25 called on Plaintiff Acosta, a reporter for CNN, to take a

1	question from him. After Mr. Acosta asked several questions
2	about the caravan of migrants heading to the U.SMexican
3	border, the President indicated that he wanted to move on to 4	call on another reporter but Mr. Acosta would not be seated
5	and continued trying to ask his question and then he would 6	not give up the microphone, even when approached by an 7	intern employed by the White House Press Office who 8	attempted to retrieve it from him. The President made
9	several comments toward Mr. Acosta while this happened,
10	including, You are a rude, terrible person, and, When you
11	report fake news which CNN does a lot, you are an enemy of 12	the people. Eventually, Mr. Acosta did relinquish the 13	microphone.

14 That night, his Secret -- the Secret Service asked 15 Mr. Acosta to relinquish his hard pass, his credential that 16 allows him access to the White House press facilities. That 17 same evening, the White House Press Secretary, Sarah 18 Sanders, posted a video on Twitter purporting to show the 19 exchange between Mr. Acosta, the intern and the President. 20 In a tweet, Ms. Sanders cited the conduct in the video as 21 the reason that Mr. Acosta's hard pass had been revoked. In 22 a tweet, she characterized Mr. Acosta as placing her hand --23 his hands on the intern and she also asserted that Mr. 24 Acosta had been disrespectful to his colleagues to not allow 25 them to -- the opportunity to answer a question.

1	The next day, on November 8th, CNN sent a letter
2	to the White House requesting that Ms the reporter's
3	credentials be reinstated immediately. CNN alleged that the 4	White House simply did not like the content of the questions
5	posed to the President and threatened to take legal action
6	if the revocation was not reversed.
7	The next day, on November 9th, the President
8	suggested that other reporters might have their credentials
9	revoked and that reporters must treat the White House with 10	respect and treat the presidency with respect and he also 11	conceded that Mr. Acosta's but he also conceded that Mr.
12	Acosta's conduct toward the Press Office intern had not been 13	overly horrible.
14	Then the long holiday weekend intervened. And on
15	the morning of Tuesday, November 13th, CNN and Mr. Acosta
16	filed this lawsuit and moved for a temporary restraining 17	order.
18	That morning, after the same morning, after the 19	suit was filed, Ms. Sanders issued a written statement
20	setting forth reasons for the revocation of Ms Mr.
21	Acosta's hard pass. It read: We have been advised that CNN
22	has filed a complaint challenging the suspension of Jim 23	Acosta's hard pass. This is just more grandstanding from 24	CNN and we will vigorously defend against this lawsuit.
25	CNN, who has nearly 50 additional hard pass holders, and Mr.

1	Acosta is no more or less special than any other media
2	outlet or reporter with respect to the First Amendment.
3	After Mr. Acosta asked the President two questions, each of 4	which the President answered, he physically refused to 5	surrender a White House microphone to an intern so that 6	other reporters might ask their questions. This was not the 7	first time this reporter had has inappropriately refused
8	to yield to other reporters. The White House cannot run an 9	orderly and fair press conference when a reporter acts this 10	way which is neither appropriate nor professional. The 11	First Amendment is not served when a single reporter, of 12	more than 150 present, attempts to monopolize the floor. If 13	there is no check on this type of behavior, it impedes the
14	ability of the President, the White House staff and members
15	of the media to conduct business.
16	To obtain a temporary restraining order, the 17	plaintiffs must clearly demonstrate, one, a likelihood of 18	success on the merits of their claim; two, a likely 19	irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief;
20	three, a balance of the that the balance of the equities
21	is in their favor; and, four, that the TRO is in the public 22	interest. And where the Government is the party opposing
23	the TRO, the Court merges the latter two factors into a 24 single inquiry.

Much of our discussion at the hearing the other

1	day concerned the applicability or inapplicability of the 2	D.C. Circuit case Sherrill v. Knight. I'm going to first
3	talk about the likelihood of success of [sic] the merits
4	with regard to the plaintiffs' Fifth Amendment due process
5	claim.

6 Much of our discussion at the hearing concerned 7 the applicability of Sherrill v. Knight. I've read the case 8 closely and I think it's fair to conclude, as the Government 9 argued, that there are at least some portions of it that 10 plaintiffs would rely on that are fairly characterized as dicta, but if Sherrill stands for anything at all, I think 11 12 it's unavoidable to conclude that it -- to conclude anything 13 other than it stands for the Fifth Amendment's due process 14 clause protects a reporter's First Amendment liberty 15 interest in a White House press pass. Whether that's a 16 holding I agree with or not is another thing, but that is 17 not relevant. The case has not been abrogated and, as a 18 district judge, I must apply the precedent of this circuit 19 as I see it.

So let me quote from Sherrill. Quote, In our view, the procedural requirements of notice and the factual basis for denial and opportunity for the applicant to respond to these and a final written statement of the reasons for denial are compelled by the foregoing determination that the interest of a bona fide Washington

1	correspondent in obtaining a White House press pass is
2	protected by the First Amendment. This First Amendment
3	interest undoubtedly qualifies as liberty which may not be 4	denied without due process of law under the Fifth Amendment.
5	A few more words about Sherrill before I move on.
6	The Government argued that the holding of Sherrill
7	is limited to Secret Service restrictions based on security
8	concerns, and the Government points out there's nothing in 9	the record here that the security of the President or the 10	White House is at issue, but Sherrill, as I read it,
11	provides no reason why the court's recognition of a First
12	Amendment interest in a press pass in a White House press
13	pass would turn on whether that decision to limit that 14	interest was made by the White House Press Office or the 15	Secret Service or any other part of the executive branch,
16	and the case suggests no reason to me why the due process
17	required to deny someone a pass would turn on a specific 18	component of the executive branch that made that decision.
19	The court was very clear that the basis of this interest was 20	rooted in the First Amendment and not the decision of any 21	part of the executive branch to agree that Sherrill should 22	be granted the press pass.
23	The Government also made the point that there is

The Government also made the point that there is case law for the proposition that the public doesn't have a general First Amendment right to enter the White House

1	grounds. I have no quarrel with that at all, but Sherrill
2	holds that once the White House opens a portion of it up to 3	reporters for their use, some kind of First Amendment
4	liberty interest protected by a due process right is 5	created, and I simply have no choice but to apply that
6	precedent here.
7	The Government also argued that some of the 8	factual underpinnings of Sherrill had changed and that 9	today, the White House routinely exercises discretion in 10	different ways, giving out hard passes to certain
11	journalists aside from whatever review the Secret Service
12	undertakes for security purposes. I can see how that might 13	be relevant in examining the nature of whatever liberty
14	interest Sherrill holds is at stake here, but even assuming
15	that was a distinction that would make a difference in terms
16	of how I apply Sherrill, I don't have any evidence in the 17	record here; I don't have any declarations or sworn 18	statements that explain how that factual landscape has 19	shifted since Sherrill was decided.
20	And, finally, the Government makes the point that 21	the First Amendment does not restrict the ability of the 21 the First Amendment does not restrict the ability of the 22 President to dictate the terms of how he chooses to engage 23 or not engage with any particular journalist. That seems 24 entirely correct to me, but nothing in the holding of 25 Sherrill relating to the Fifth Amendment due process right

Г

1	it recognized contradicts that. In fact, Sherrill
2	explicitly recognizes the President's right to engage with 3	whomever he pleases. Certainly, he need not ever call on 4	Mr. Acosta again. But under Sherrill, as I read it, the 5	government must provide Mr. Acosta due process if it is to 6	revoke his hard pass. Accordingly, the likelihood that the 7	plaintiffs succeed on the First on the Fifth Amendment
8	claim hinges on whether the government provided adequate due
9	process to Mr. Acosta. The court in Sherrill held that this 10	process must include notice, an opportunity to rebut the 11	government's reasons and a written decision. And all the 12	court although the court in Sherrill did not have 13	occasion to address it, when an important interest is at 14	stake and when the government is able to provide this 15	process before deprivation, it generally must do so. There
16	is no evidence that one of the few exceptions to this rule
17	would apply here such as some kind of emergency. So I do 18	hold that plaintiffs have demonstrated a likelihood of 19	success on their claim that adequate process was not 20	provided to Mr. Acosta. Indeed, whatever process occurred
21	within the government is still so shrouded in mystery that 22	the Government could not tell me at oral argument who made
23	the initial decision to revoke Mr. Acosta's press pass
24	his hard pass.
25	On the notice, as for notice, the Government

1	points to only one statement that could possibly constitute
2	prior notice to Mr. Acosta that his pass would be revoked,
3	the President's statements to him during the exchange at the 4	press conference on November 7th, but the President's
5	statements did not revoke did not reference Mr. Acosta's
6	hard pass at all, let alone that it would be revoked;
7	therefore, that statement cannot have put him on notice of 8	the government's intention to revoke it.

9 Now, it is true that the public and Mr. Acosta 10 were eventually provided two things. First, explanations as 11 to why his hard pass was revoked through Ms. Sanders's 12 tweets; and a written statement of explanation, apparently 13 prompted by this litigation, but given their timing and 14 their lack of connection to Mr. Acosta's opportunity to 15 rebut -- which we'll talk about in a moment -- these belated 16 efforts were hardly sufficient to satisfy due process.

17 As for Mr. Acosta's opportunity to be heard in 18 rebuttal, the Government points to the letter CNN sent to 19 the White House the day after his hard pass was revoked, but 20 this does not reflect a meaningful opportunity to rebut the 21 government's reasons for the revocation or to challenge the 22 appropriateness of the government's action. Indeed, anyone 23 can avail themselves of the mail, and there's nothing in the 24 record that demonstrates that whoever the decisionmaker --25 the initial decisionmaker was in this case read or

1	considered the letter. And, of course, the letter was sent 2	after the revocation, not beforehand. The need for the 3	opportunity to be heard seems especially important in this 4	case when the record strongly suggests that one of the 5	initial specific reasons for the revocation cited by the 6	government that Mr. Acosta laid his hands on the White
7	House intern was likely untrue and was at least partly 8	based on evidence that was of questionable accuracy.
9	At oral argument, the Government made the point
10	that more process would not have helped here because the 11	ultimate decisionmaker I believe, is how the Government
12	referred to the President at a minimum, ratified this 13	action. Maybe that's so, but on the record before me which,
14	at this point, is devoid of evidence concerning who, in the 15	government, first reached this decision; how they reached
16	the decision; whether they considered CNN's letter or 17	whether they considered potential other responses by the 18	government, I simply cannot assume that that would be so.
19	So in light of all the above, I find that the 20	plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their 21	Fifth Amendment due process claim.
22	I'll now talk about irreparable harm with regard
23	to that claim.
24	The plaintiffs also must demonstrate that
25	irreparable harm will result in the absence of preliminary

1	relief. That harm must be both certain and great, and it
2	must be actual and not theoretical. Here, harm to Mr.
3	Acosta has already occurred. As already explained, he's 4	demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of his 5	claim that his Fifth Amendment due process rights were 6	violated such that his liberty interests were deprived;
7	therefore, I don't need to speculate or theorize as to 8	whether harm will occur absent preliminary relief, but for 9	plaintiffs to satisfy their burden, the harm must be 10	irreparable. Constitutional injuries are often considered
11	irreparable due to their very nature. Indeed, the D.C.
12	Circuit has held that, quote, Suits for declaratory and 13	injunctive relief against the threatened invasion of a 14	constitutional right do not ordinarily require proof of any
15	injury other than the threatened constitutional deprivation
16	itself, closed quote.
1 17

17 On the other hand, procedural due process injuries 18 do not necessarily cause irreparable harm when, for example, 19 the thing that is deprived is tangible property, because the 20 due process violation that led to that injury might be 21 reparable with money damages. Here, the procedural due 22 process violation at issue that has led to the deprivation 23 -- to a deprivation of what Sherrill requires me to recognize as a liberty interest as opposed to a property 24 25 interest that's grounded in, quote, The First Amendment

Γ

1	guarantee of freedom of the press, closed quote.
2	Moreover, the First Amendment interests, as 3	recognized in Sherrill, were not vested merely in 4	publications or agencies. They were liberties of the 5	individual journalists themselves. For that reason, that 6	CNN may still send another journalist or other journalist to 7	the White House does not make the harm to Mr. Acosta any 8	less irreparable. Each day that he is deprived of that 9	interest without the process prescribed by the court in 10	Sherrill, he suffers a harm that cannot be remedied in 11	retrospect. The Court cannot restore his access to press
12	briefings that have already occurred or to conversations in 13	the White House press facilities that have already been had.
14	And so on this highly, highly unusual set of facts
15	and interests at stake, I do find that the plaintiffs have 16	met their burden of establishing that irreparable harm has 17	and will continue to occur in the absence of preliminary 18	relief.
19	The next factors are the balance of the equities
20	and the public interests.
21	In balancing the equities at stake, I find that 22	the harm to Mr. Acosta from sustaining an ongoing violation
23	of his Fifth Amendment due process rights outweighs the 24	government's interest in orderly, respectful press
25	conferences. This is especially so because the government can serve its stated interest in other ways during this litigation or perhaps until it is back before me arguing that their due process obligations had been fulfilled.

Obviously, the balance of the equities would not likely have come out this way if Mr. Acosta had been excluded for safety or security reasons, in which case, my deference to the executive equities would be far, far higher. But even in this circumstance, I don't take lightly the executive branch's weighty general interest in control of its White House press facility, but the balance here is tipped by the fact that Sherrill obligates me to recognize the violation of Mr. Acosta's due process rights and the resulting impact on his First Amendment interests. So in finding also, in finding that these factors favor the plaintiffs, I have also considered case law that suggests that constitutional violations are always contrary to the public's interest.
So because the plaintiffs have shown a likelihood that the government has violated Mr. Acosta's Fifth Amendment rights under Sherrill, because the type of injury he has suffered is irreparable and because the public interest in the balance of equities favor granting a temporary restraining order, I will grant the application for a for the temporary restraining order here. I will order the defendants immediately restore Mr. Acosta's hard pass until further order of the Court or the restraining

1	order expires. And if, at some point after restoring the 2	hard pass, the Government would like to move to vacate the 3	restraining order on the grounds that it has fulfilled its 4	due process obligations, then it may, of course, do so and I
5	will promptly address that and then the remaining bases for 6	the TRO.
7	I want to emphasize the very limited nature of 8	today's ruling. In resolving this TRO, I haven't because 9	I've found that it must be granted on as to the due
10	process claim, I haven't had to reach the plaintiffs' First 11	Amendment claim at all in which they alleged that the 12	government engaged in viewpoint or content discrimination.
13	So I want to make very clear a couple of things. I have not 14	determined that the First Amendment was violated here; I 15	have not determined what legal standard would apply to the 16	First Amendment claim here; I have not determined the 17	specific nature of the First Amendment interest that 18	Sherrill recognizes or that Sherrill at least doesn't 19	describe but recognizes, yes; and I haven't determined what 20	portions of Sherrill, if any, would bind me on those 21	questions.
22	So let me turn to the parties, then, and suggest 23	that as far as procedurally moving forward goes, one the avenue I thought of is to give you all some time to consult with your clients; assess your positions; and come back

24

1	early next week perhaps Tuesday afternoon to see how 2	you all would like to proceed from here. I trust the 3	this litigation will continue in a rapid pace. Either
4	party?
5	MR. BOUTROUS: Thank you. Thank you very much,
6	Your Honor.
7	That sounds like a good process to us. We can
8	confer. We may be able to just confer and then report back
9	Monday with the proposal and see if we can work out either a 10	briefing schedule for the preliminary injunction or 11	something else and, if not, we can just come back and see
12	you on Tuesday.
13	THE COURT: All right. So your proposal would be
14	a written joint report for the parties
15	MR. BOUTROUS: Would that
16	THE COURT: on Monday?
17	MR. BOUTROUS: Yeah. Would that work for the 18	Court?
19	THE COURT: All right. That's fine, if that's 20	but I'd like to hear from Mr. Burnham.
21	MR. BURNHAM: Your Honor, I'd like to talk to our 22	clients. That should be okay, but I'd just like to talk to 23	our clients and come up with a proposal before we 24	THE COURT: Absolutely. I mean, we can't have any 25	quicker turnaround than a joint report

1 MR. BURNHAM: Right. 2 THE COURT: -- on Monday. So --3 MR. BURNHAM: Right. THE COURT: I mean, I --4 5 MR. BURNHAM: The timing certainly works for us. 6 Thank you. 7 THE COURT: Fair enough. So I'll get that report. Obviously, if you can agree on something, great; if you 8 9 can't agree, if you would still submit it jointly but just 10 lay out your respective positions on where we go from here, I'll take that under advisement, and my hope is -- well, 11 12 depending on what you all agree to, if we need to come back 13 to court next week, even though it's the short week -- the 14 holiday -- I will be available to do that. 15 MR. BURNHAM: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. 16 THE COURT: All right. MR. BOUTROUS: We greatly appreciate it, Your 17 18 Honor. 19 THE COURT: All right. 20 MR. BOUTROUS: And then just procedurally, under 21 the TRO, we'll just proceed to get the hard pass back 22 immediately and have it reactivated. Thank you very much. 23 THE COURT: Yes. Is there any other -- anything 24 further -- else from the plaintiffs that you think I need to 25 address today before I turn to Mr. Burnham?

1	MR. BOUTROUS: I think that's it, Your Honor.
2	THE COURT: All right.
3	MR. BOUTROUS: Thank you.
4	THE COURT: Sir?
5	MR. BURNHAM: So Your Honor, under the local
6	rules, our opposition to the PI is due on Tuesday.
7	THE COURT: Okay.
8	MR. BURNHAM: Would it be okay, given all that's 9	going on, to suspend that deadline until we file our joint 10	status report?
11	THE COURT: Yeah. I assume the plaintiffs
12	MR. BURNHAM: I assume
13	THE COURT: would agree to that.
14	MR. BURNHAM: We haven't spoken about it.
15	THE COURT: Yes.
16	MR. BOUTROUS: That's fine with
17	MR. BURNHAM: Okay.
18	MR. BOUTROUS: That's fine with us, Your Honor.
19	THE COURT: Yeah. So that deadline certainly will 20	be, you know, held in abeyance
21	MR. BURNHAM: Thank you, Your Honor.
22	THE COURT: vacated until I get your report and 23	we'll see where we go from there.
24	MR. BURNHAM: Thank you, Your Honor.
25	THE COURT: All right.

1	MR. BOUTROUS: Thank you.
2	THE COURT: If there's nothing further, then,
3	counsel's dismissed.
4	THE DEPUTY CLERK: All rise. This Honorable Court
5	is adjourned.
