METHODOLOGY

The NBC News|SurveyMonkey National poll was conducted online between July 2, 2019 and July 16, 2019 among a national sample of 15,529 adults aged 18 and over, including 13,553 registered voters. Respondents for this survey were selected from the more than two million people who take surveys on the SurveyMonkey platform each day.

A multi-stage raking was performed to construct national weights. First state-division geographic units were defined according to state-level population sizes and Census division classification. States with over five million residents are defined as stand-alone units, while smaller states are grouped together within Census division to form secondary geographic units. At the first stage of raking, the sample is weighted to adult population sizes of state-division geographic units to generate initial weights. The second stage of raking adjusts initial weights by gender, age, race, and education for non-voters of 2016 general election. Gender, age, race and education are weighted to match targets from the American Community Survey within each Census region, while the 2016 presidential vote is weighted to the national election results obtained from the Federal Election Commission.

Because the sample is based on those who initially self-selected for participation rather than a probability sample, no estimates of sampling error can be calculated. All surveys may be subject to multiple sources of error, including, but not limited to sampling error, coverage error, and measurement error.

To assess the variability in the estimates and account for design effects, we create a bootstrap confidence interval to produce an error estimate. The bootstrap confidence interval for this survey among registered voters is plus or minus 1.2 percentage points.

To calculate the bootstrap confidence interval, we use the weighted data to generate 5,000 independent samples and calculate the 95% confidence intervals for the weighted average. When analyzing the survey results and their accuracy, this error estimate should be taken into consideration in much the same way that analysis of probability polls takes into account the margin of sampling error.
