CHEF SAYS HIS 'MISTAKE' LED TO BWI GUN INCIDENT

TEXT:
World famous chef Paul Prudhomme didn't hesitate when he slid his briefcase into the X-ray machine at Baltimore-Washington International Airport. He didn't even think about the loaded handgun.

So imagine Mr. Prudhomme's surprise when the guard looked at the X-ray screen, then back at Mr. Prudhomme, who did for Cajun food what Bob Marley did for reggae.

"The guard looked real funny," Mr. Prudhomme said in a telephone interview recounting his arrest Tuesday morning. "I said it must be the portable telephone.

"He came over and asked me if it was my bag. I said 'yes,' and he reached in and pulled out the gun. I couldn't believe it."

Mr. Prudhomme was in Baltimore to help cook at a $200-a-plate fund-raiser for preserving the Chesapeake Bay. The proceeds of the event, held Monday night at the National Aquarium in Baltimore and attended by nearly 400 people, raised money for the Chesapeake Bay Trust, a state-managed non-profit organization.

The chef said he has two briefcases at home in New Orleans, one for traveling, the other for carrying handguns. He said he took the handgun satchel because it contained some magazines he wanted to read.

He said he removed the weapons, including a .357 magnum and a .38-caliber handgun, but forgot about the .22-caliber, five-shot revolver stuffed in a side pocket.

State police charged Mr. Prudhomme with possession of a handgun and attempting to carrying a firearm onto a plane, a felony. He was released on an unsecured $1,000 bond. No court date has been set.

It is legal for airplane passengers to take guns with them on trips, as long as they follow@2-|Yn(|.kV ^ .V>
Z =-,zhx9P3rom airline to airline.
Mr. Prudhomme was flying on Delta Air Lines.

Delta spokesman Robert B. Harper said passengers who have guns must tell the ticket agent when they check in -- before going through security.

He said the gun must be unloaded and sealed in a container that is marked to show what is inside. The airline then stores the gun in the cargo pay for the duration of the flight and returns it to its owner in the baggage-claim area.

"Not many people attempt to bring a gun onto an airplane," Mr. Harper said. "That's pretty stupid. People know it is against the law." But he said Mr. Prudhomme's explanation "sounds reasonable."

The chef said he checked the briefcase containing the gun on his flight from New Orleans to Baltimore. "It is legal to do that," he said.

Not according to Mr. Harper, who said that even in that case, the gun still must be turned in to airline personnel. Even checked baggage goes through X-ray machines. But the Delta spokesman could not explain why workers operating the X-ray machines at the New Orleans airport didn't pick up on the weapon.

Mr. Prudhomme said guns are his hobby. He said he is a member of an indoor shooting range and that he shoots target practice.

But hunting is not on Mr. Prudhomme's hobby list. "My dad always told me you should only hunt when you need food," the chef said. "I don't need any more food."

Mr. Prudhomme said he does not travel with his guns and called Tuesday's incident a mistake. "I felt that I was taking the time up of four or five officers for nothing," he said. "Everybody makes a mistake."

In a statement apologizing to the staff at BWI, the chef said, "I applaud the airport security for their efficiency in detecting the gun. They were polite but firm in explaining that I had violated a federal law."

"I regret this incident. Believe me, the only 'heat' I wanted to bring to Baltimore was my seasoning line."

LOADED GUN COOKS UP TROUBLE FOR CHEF PRUDHOMME AT BWI

An article in yesterday's editions of The Sun incorrectly identified The Baltim'rm International Culinary College by its former title, the Culinary Arts Institute.

The Sun regrets the error.

The chef whose name is virtually synonymous with Cajun cooking was arrested at BWI Airport yesterday as he allegedly tried to carry a gun onto his flight to New Orleans.

Paul E. Prudhomme was in town to help prepare the food for a $200-a-plate fund-raiser in Baltimore on Monday night. He was stopped as he passed through a security checkpoint on his way to board his plane for home.

State police at Baltimore-Washington International Airport said Mr. Prudhomme, 52, was carrying a fully loaded, five-shot, .22-caliber revolver in a small carry-on bag.

A private security guard saw the weapon as the bag passed through an X-ray machine at Pier B, which serves America West and Delta airlines, about 8:30 a.m., police said.

The chef was charged with possession of a handgun and attempting to carry a firearm onto a plane, which is a felony. He was released on an unsecured $1,000 bond and was on his way home last night.

State police Sgt. Vernon L. Farro said the weapon was registered in Louisiana but not in Maryland. "There are a lot of misconceptions of what you can do with a permit," Sergeant Farro said.

Police said Mr. Prudhomme did not explain to them why the gun was in his bag.

Mr. Prudhomme arrived in Baltimore over the weekend and took part in a variety of activities, including a cooking seminar at the Culinary Arts Institute.

Monday night, he and nine colleagues from around the country teamed up with 10 local chefs to create a 10-course feast for 400 people at the National Aquarium in Baltimore. The fund-raiser benefited the Chesapeake Bay Trust, a non-profit, state-managed organization that promotes bay preservation.

Mr. Prudhomme could not be reached for comment.

The sponsor of the fund-raiser said the chef, who owns K-Paul's Louisiana Kitchen in the French Quarter of New Orleans, took another flight home after he posted bail.

Mr. Prudhomme originated blackened redfish, a dish that made him famous, and helped introduce the spicy style of cooking to the world.

He has written many cookbooks and has made frequent appearances on national television.

His visit to Baltimore was sponsored by Nancy R. Longo, chef and owner of the Pierpoint Restaurant in Fells Point.

Ms. Longo said she and other sponsors of the fund-raiser are worried that negative publicity about the incident could be harmful to the successful event.

"We asked (state officials) for personal-dignity reasons, because Paul is a nice man and our friend, to see if they can keep it from being public," she said.

"Police said they wouldn't give that information out to anyone unless it was requested."

Ms. Longo said that she accompanied Mr. Prudhomme and his wife to the airport yesterday morning but would not describe the events of the arrest.

After Mr. Prudhomme was taken into custody, Ms. Longo called Thomas W. Burke, the director of the state Bay Communications Office, who said he called the court commissioner in Glen Burnie to find out what had happened.

Mr. Burke said he did not suggest to anyone that the information on Mr. Prudhomme's arrest be kept quiet.

"It was personal interest on my part," he said. "Here is this world-famous chef who I had just met the night before. The next thing I know, he was arrested by police."

"The only reason we were concerned is that we did a lot of work through my office to help raise money."

"We are concerned with any kind of negative publicity that would reflect on the trust."

No court date has been set.
